Voluntary Rationing Of Meat Advocated

Top U. S. Officials Push Proposal; Truman to Hear Cabinet Food Group

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A program of voluntary meat rationing to save wheat vitally needed by hungry countries overseas from being fed to livestock, appeared imminent last night.

Two top-flight officials, Norris E. Dodd, Acting Secretary of Agriculture, and Commerce Secretary W. Averell Harriman, both advocated such action.

A third, Chester C. Davis, president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank, and head of the dormant Famine Emergency Committee, also urged promptness. Last week Davis, a member of the Harriman Foreign Aid Committee, recommended voluntary rationing of meat "at the butcher shop" by the country's housewives.

Denies Committee Revival

Davis yesterday denied an earlier report that he planned to revive the famine committee. That committee, he pointed out, came into being on call of President Truman, and only the President can set it up again.

At his home in Albuquerque, Agriculture Secretary Anderson said that the Cabinet food committee will meet Monday to report to President Truman on prices and the export program. The committee includes Anderson, Harriman and Secretary of State Marshall.

The Washington Post learned that tentative details of a voluntary rationing program are now being studied. Chief among them is the revival of "meatless days," first established by Herbert Hoover as food administrator during World War I. Next are housewives' pledges of voluntary reduction.

Other Cuts May Be Asked

A reduction in the consumption of other products requiring grain, may also be sought. These would include dairy products (milk, butter, cheese), and poultry and eggs.

Dairy farmers and poultry raisers may turn to wheat as a substitute for scarce corn if the present high demand for such foods keeps up, officials fear. A lessening of demand will bring less grain feeding, they predict, and make more grain available for export.

Storm Cools D. C. Briefly; Damage Light

A rumbling thunderstorm doused heat-soggy Washington with 1.62 inches of rain about midday yesterday, toppling trees and powerlines in scattered sections of the area.

The storm, one of a fleet which moved across the Weather Bureau's radarscope most of the day, reached from Baltimore, Md., to below Fort Belvoir, Va.

Lashing rain and wind gusts up to 36 miles an hour pulled down temperatures in Washington from 77 to 10:30 a. m. to 71 degrees an hour later. But by 3 p. m. the mercury was back up to 80. The storm lasted from 10:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m.

Forecast for today is much cooler—probably about 78—and sunny.

If the forecast holds true, the turn to lower temperatures will be the first trend toward September normal recorded this month. Thermometers have registered over normal every day this month, ranging from 23 degrees to 6 degrees.

Southeast Coast Alerted For Possible Hurricane

Miami, Fla., Sept. 15 (AP).—A long stretch of the East Coast from Florida to North Carolina was officially alerted and warned tonight to expect high tides and heavy seas with increasing winds offshore as a great hurricane approached.

Storm warnings were flying in the Bahamas and the tropical disturbance at 5 p. m. was 300 miles east of Palm Beach, Fla., its 140-mile winds only a little more than 24 hours away from the mainland. A northward curvature was indicated for tomorrow, but storm warning experts said that unless the change in course develops, hurricane warnings for a part of the alerted area are a possibility.

The area alerted for the hurricane reaches from Vero Beach, Fla., to Cape Hatteras, N. C.

Hurricane winds 100 miles in diameter are whirling around the storm's center, and heavy gales extend outward 200 miles to the north and 100 miles to the south.

Chief Forecaster Grady Norton said the alert was not intended to spread alarm, but that persons in the area should plan for the possible [illegible] of a severe hurricane

Plans Listing Agency

Legion Will Help Veterans Get Head Start on Housing

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Veterans are to be given a head start in obtaining housing here, under a program worked out by the American Legion and local real estate dealers.

Details of the Legion's plan will be announced today.

A listing agency will be set up within the Legion here where local landlords will list vacancies and where veterans may get a "time priority," real estate men disclosed last night.

William E. Shannon 3d, vice chairman of the Legion housing committee, said that every real estate man approached so far agreed to go forward with the Legion program. Shannon made it clear that all veterans, whether members of the Legion or not, could obtain aid through the proposed agency.

Charles H. Hillegeist, real estate official here, said:

"The Legion has a hell of a good program. I'm sick of the promises the veteran has received, but here he has a real program. I know that a considerable number of landlords here have pledged to cooperate with the Legion on it."

Hillegeist said that at present the former GI is primarily in need of rental housing, and the referral service to be set up by the Legion will aid the veteran.

Other Legion spokesmen said that the referral agency will deal with both rental and purchasing of housing, including dwellings and apartments. They said landlords will list all vacancies as soon as they become available, and that a time allowance will be made so that veterans will get the first chance at the housing.

Food Price Rise Arouses GOP Interest

Republican Leaders Reported Disturbed; U. S. Takes Steps

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Food prices continued to skyrocket yesterday while the Justice Department opened a Nation-wide war on price fixing and Republican Senators showed increased interest in speedy congressional action to halt the dizzy upswing.

The Republican National Committee is reportedly greatly disturbed over the possible political reaction from current high prices, since the GOP is held responsible for removal of price controls.

While not advocating return of controls and rationing, various Republican spokesmen on Capitol Hill yesterday reflected that concern by proposals ranging from voluntary rationing to imposition of some further governmental controls on grain and exports.

Among major developments yesterday:

1. In Chicago, 42 companies, individuals and associations in the meat industry were subpenaed to appear before a special Federal grand jury which will begin a price investigation September 22.

2. In Washington, Attorney General Tom Clark directed United States attorneys gathered here from all parts of the United States to start a "grass roots" campaign against any illegal price-

Arlington Man Killed In B-17 Crash

8 Others Die as Army Bomber Explodes In Air Near Aberdeen

An Army B-17 Flying Fortress exploded in midair and plunged into Bush River near Aberdeen, Md., yesterday, killing nine persons, among them Lieut. John Whitney, 24, of 2811 8th st., South Arlington, Va.

Officials at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, home base of the bomber, listed the other victims as:

Maj. Frank T. Moore, San Angelo, Tex.; Lieut. Jesus Lucio, Brownsville, Tex.; T/Sergt. Robert N. Reagor, Galesburg, Ill.; M/Sergt. Julian J. Skalski, Philadelphia, Pa., and Paul A. St. Vrain, Havre de Grace, Md., civilian project director at the proving ground.

Pfc. James W. Coneys, New York City; S/Sergt. William M. Fitzpatrick, Old Fort, N. C., and Gabriel J. Day, a civilian photographer at the Proving Ground.

Caught in Wreckage

The victims presumably were caught in the wreckage, which sank in 90 feet of water.

Only survivor was Capt. Charles W. Warmack, 25, of Paris, Tenn., who parachuted from the four-engined plane. Army officials declined to permit Captain Warmack to be questioned.

A radio message from the United States freighter American Ranger gave first report of the crash.

Capt. James A. S. Knowlton, captain of the freighter, said "suddenly the plane exploded in midair at approximately 1000 feet altitude. One wing blew off and many small pieces blew off and burst into flame. Many acres of water around the ship were covered with smoke and flame," he said.

The Ranger called Army and Coast Guard vessels to the scene.

An Army public relations officer said the bomber was carrying live bombs to be tested and was on a routine training flight out of the Aberdeen base.

Twenty Miles From Baltimore

The crash scene is about 20 miles north of Baltimore.

Lieutenant Whitney, a navigator who was shot down over the Ruhr during the war and was hidden for eight months by the Dutch underground before making his way out, is a son of Carl D. Whitney, supervisor of the Federal Housing Administration. His wife, Virginia, whom he married about a year ago, lives at Havre de Grace where they had been living since his transfer to Aberdeen.

He was a native of Davenport, Iowa, and formerly lived in Des Moines.

He leaves his parents; a brother, Capt. Morton Whitney, and a sister, Kathryn Whitney, who is attending Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Brig. Gen. Alfred B. Quinton, Aberdeen commandant, named a board of officers to investigate the crash after announcing the cause is undetermined at present.

4 Killed in Cuba During Arrest Of Police Major

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 15 (AP).—Three men and a woman barricaded in the home of Police Maj. Antonio Morin Dopico were killed today when police stormed the residence in suburban Mariano to arrest Dopico.

The house was under attack of heavy gunfire for 2 hours before army troops, sent to reinforce the police, used hand grenades to drive out those inside.

The dead were identified as Maj. Emilio Tro, recently appointed police academy instructor; Police Lieut. Marianao Puertas Yero, Jesus Dieguez, alleged secretary of the secret organization "Union Insurreccional Revolutionary," and Dopico's wife.

Reliable sources said Dopico's arrest had been ordered because he was the leader of a group of alleged "revolutionaries" believed responsible for the recent slaying of a police captain.

Hours Before Season Opens

Va. Oystermen Get Rich Haul In Illegal Raid Off Md. Shore

By Walter Wood
Post Reporter

Colonial Beach, Va., Sept. 15.—Rivermen of this briny town signalled the opening of the Potomac River oyster season with a midnight raid on Maryland bivalve beds.

Getting the jump on both Maryland and Virginia authorities, they hastily rigged their outboard bredges shortly before sundown yesterday and then waited until darkness to sail under the cover of night.

Unannounced, even unto other natives of the old river resort, they sneaked out of historic Monroe Bay's quiet waters and made for the Free State's shore, running lights on full. The boldness of the lights cast away suspicion from their boats.

Their haul was more than 300 bushels of oysters, selling today at $2 a basketfull.

And their haul—made hours before the legal season opened at sun-up—was the only significant catch in these reaches of the Potomac today, so far as a Washington Post reporter and photographer could determine with the aid of a Maryland patrol boat and her crew of three.

The spotlight of publicity played over the oystermen's activities here in February when The Washington Post pictured their daring exploits. The oystermen thus re-

50,000 Italians and Yugoslavs Battle at Birth of Free Trieste; Strikes Peril Cabinet at Rome

Leftists Push Their Efforts to Topple Gasperi Government

Rome, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi called two more emergency governmental conferences today when leftist leaders pushed plans to call out four million workers in an effort to topple the politically moderate cabinet.

De Gasperi, who purged Communists and leftwing Socialists from the cabinet last spring, held afternoon and evening meetings with his ministers and labor and management spokesmen. No statements were issued.

Communist Palmiro Togliatti and Socialist Piero Nenni, who control the Labor Federation, rejected all government appeals to end existing strikes and threats of new strikes that they hope will bring the national economic life to a standstill and force De Gasperi out of office.

Italy was facing the worst social unrest of its modern history on the very day that she became again a sovereign nation with ratification of her World War II peace treaty.

A State of Peace

Italy entered a state of external peace for the first time since Benito Mussolini declared war against England and France on June 10, 1940. But internally she had become a battleground of two ideologies, as represented by Russia and the United States.

De Gasperi's cabinet worked desperately to end a week-old strike of one million agricultural workers in north Italy which jeopardized the nation's grain and rice harvest, and to halt a strike tomorrow of 850,000 metal workers which will paralyze the heavy industry of the north so vitally needed for reconstruction.

(Indicating mounting American concern over leftist attempts to overthrow Italy's government, a State Department spokesman in Washington yesterday deplored the widespread strikes in Italy as a maneuver to "serve political ends."

Charges Denied

[The spokesman, Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to Secretary of State George C. Marshall, also flatly rejected claims by Italian Communist Leader Palmiro Togliatti that the United States is trying to dominate Italy.

[McDermott told a press conference that the United States has the "greatest sympathy" for the efforts of Italian workers to raise their standard of living. But, he added:

["On the other hand, widespread interruptoion of production, which is intended to serve political ends only, will inevitably render more difficult any effort to help Italy help herself."]

Allied Powers Make Peace With Five European Nations Formal

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP).—The victorious Allies made formal peace tonight with five European nations whose decision to hitch their wagons to Adolf Hitler's star brought only the ignominy of defeat.

At ceremonies in Moscow's Kremlin and the French foreign office in Paris, treaties were formally deposited for Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland in the windup for them of the war started by Nazi legions eight years ago.

Italy received a bill for 20 years of fascism when four thick, red-bound treaties were deposited in a five-minute ceremony at 11 a. m. in Foreign Minister Georges Bidault's private office at the Quai d'Orsay.

The treaty was officially put into effect at Monday midnight Greenwich Mean Time (7 p. m. Eastern Standard Time).

Treaties with Hungary, Finland, Romania and Bulgaria were deposited in the Kremlin at 6 p. m. Moscow time (11 a. m. EDT) and the effective hour was set for 9 p. m. (12 noon EDT).

The four official copies of the Italian peace treaty, signed in Paris February 10, were presented along with necessary instruments of ratification by representatives of France, Great Britain, Russia and the United States.

In general, the five treaties make the losers responsible for $1,330,000,000 in reparations, reduce the territories of Italy, Romania, Hungary and Finland, drastically limit their armed forces, and establish provisions aimed at barring rebirth of fascism.

Within 90 days the United States must withdraw occupation troops from Italy, and Russia must pull out of Bulgaria in the same period. The Soviet Union was given the right to keep soldiers in Hungary and Romania in order to maintain communication lines with occupied Austria.

The Allies must still write treaties for Austria, Germany and Japan.

Under the treaty, Italy will be stripped of her African empire, must give 3000 square miles of Venezia Giulia and a number of Adriatic islands to Yugoslavia, and turn the important Adriatic port of Trieste and territory around it over to the United Nations Security Council to form the Free State of Trieste.

The Yugoslav army began occupying the newly acquired terrories tonight, a Trieste dispatch said. Marshal Tito's troops will move also into the free zone to help American and British forces assure order until the Security Council can establish a permanent government. Slavs and Italians clashed in riots in Trieste late today.

In Budapest, representatives of the American and British military missions for Hungary said they hoped to leave the country by midweek. Hungarian President Zoltan Tildy told the nation in a radio address he was "happy" that his country was once again a sovereign state.

Anglo-American Forces Withdraw Half-Hour After Tito's Deadline

Trieste, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Fifty thousand Italians and Yugoslavs battled with grenades, guns and fists in the Piazza del' Unita tonight, climaxing violence which has claimed five lives in the past 48 hours as Trieste Free Territory was born under United Nations supervisions.

Civilian police swung rifle butts and charged into mobs on horseback, beating heads and shoulders with heavy clubs, but they were mostly ineffective among the frenzied, numerically superior mobs.

(Meanwhile, later dispatches from Gorizia, Italy, on the Yugoslav frontier, said that United States and British troops had completed their withdrawal to the new Italian-Yugoslav frontier at 12::30 a. m., today (Tuesday), 30 minutes after expiration of the deadline set in an abrupt Yugoslav ultimatum.

(The evacuation was carried out nine and one-half hours ahead of time in a delicate and dangerous night operation forced by the army of Communist-dominated Yugoslavia. The Yougoslavs announced they were going t oadvance to the new frontier at midnght, date the Italian peace treaty went into effect instead of following scheduled.

After Hours of Tension

(The evacuation was effectedd after hours of tension along the old armstice line during which Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, American commander in chief, ordered his men to fire on the Yugoslavs only in self defense.

(Withdrawal of the Anglo-American forces to the new frontier had been fixed for 10 a. m. Tuesday.

At 7:30 o'clock last night an officer of Moscow-trained Marshal Tito's army arrived at the field headquarters of the Eighty-eighth Division, which General Moore commands.

The Yugoslav pointed out that the Italian treaty, for which ratifications were deposited in Paris yesterday, became effective at midnight Greenwich mean time and that the Yugoslavs were going to take up positions on the treaty-fixed frontier at once.

("They tried to embarrass us by pitching a fast curve," General Moore commented. "But we were not unprepared for such a move." He hastily sent instructions for all American military outposts to start moving back at once.

Both Move Early

(The main British forces were ordered to start moving at 10 p. m. and the Americans by midnight. Both started ahead of the deadline, however. As they moved back the triumphant troops of Tito marched singing into their new posts.

(The Italian army was caught flatfooted. It was supposed to move up to the new line this morning as the Allies moved back. American and British units guraded the frontier during the night, pending the arrival of the Italians.

(A few hours before the withdrawal, the Yugoslavs released two United States soldiers whom they had held prisoner—Lieut. John C. Dwyer, Chicago, and Cpl. Willis Smith, Waycross, Ga. They were handed over by two Yugo-

British Dip Into Last Ditch Gold Reserves

80 Millions Sold To U. S. to Purchase Needed Supplies Here

London, Sept, 15 (AP).—Britain sold 80 million dollars worth of her "last ditch" gold reserves today to buy vitally needed supplies in the United States.

The dip into the Bank of England's basic bullion reserve—the first since before the outbreak of war in 1939—was announced by the British treasury as United States Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder told a news conference that emergency help for war-damaged Europe may be necessary before the Marshall Plan to aid Europe begins.

The gold, part of the nation's estimated 600 milion pounds ($2,400,000,00) reserve, was sold to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the treasury announcement said. A treasury source said it would be used to meet "general commitments," mostly for purchases in the United States.

British Make Decision

(In Washington, United States Treasury officials said the decision to sell the gold was made by the British themselves, with the United States taking no part. They pointed out that the United States was accepting the metal under terms of a 13-year-old offer to buy all gold presented by other countries or their central banks at $35 an ounce delivered in the United States—less a "very small" handling charge.

(The Federal Reserve, these officials said, acts merely as a buy-

Council Passes Greek Issue To Assembly

Gromyko Twice Uses Veto on Proposal To Request Action

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Lake Success, Sept. 15.—The Security Council tonight dropped Greek border warfare from its agenda so that the 55-nation General Assembly, opening tomorrow, would have a free hand in recommending action.

The United States has already asked the Assembly to discuss the Greek issue. Secretary of State Marshall indicated only yesterday that he regarded it one of the most urgent problems of the coming session.

The effect of tonight's decision is the automatic death of the Security Council's subsidiary group which is now observing the guerilla warfare in northern Greece. Perhaps for this reason, Soviet Russia did not block the council's action, although it was on the losing side of a nine to two vote.

Earlier, however, Andrei Gromyko twice used Soviet vetoes to block a direct request to the General Assembly that it consider the issue, without formally dropping it from the Council's agenda.

This resolution, offered by the United States, would have had the effect of retaining the observation group, since the matter would have remained on the list of subjects before the Council.

It requested the General Assembly to consider the dispute between Greece and the three Soviet satellites on her borders, Albania,

Would Spell Out Aggression

Taft Urges U. N. Alter Charter To Base Peace Upon Justice

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 15.—Senator Robert A. Taft today called for revision of the United Nations Charter to base international peace on "justice" and spell out what "aggression" means.

The Ohio Republican, canvassing Western sentiment for his candidacy, spoke out on foreign policy at a press conference here.

He agreed "in principle" with Secretary George C. Marshall's appeal to the United Nations to stop Russia's Balkan satellites from aiding Greek guerillas.

"I do not know all the facts," said Taft. "If they are aiding the guerillas as they are reported to be, that would be aggression. Whether the United Nations can do anything about it under the Charter is another question."

"Because of the veto?" a reporter asked.

"Yes," said Taft. "But if you are going to abolish the veto, then you are going to have to do a great many things to the Charter."

In what amounted to a preview of his foreign affairs speech next week in Tacoma, Wash., the Senator went on to say the U. N. Charter, even though he voted for it, "is not judicial at all."

"The Security Council is set up for peace and security," he said. "It has no relation to justice."

He was asked if he thought there should be "early consideration of revising the Charter.

"Well," he said, "the crisis certainly makes it more urgent . . .

"We should write a law on which we can all agree. Then someone should decide whether the law is being violated before punitive action is taken.

"For example, someone might say (under the existing Charter) that Poland ought to be wiped out in the interest of peace and security because it has always been a trouble maker. But that would have nothing to do with justice."

Taft said he favored retention of the veto power until the Charter is revised to insure "justice."

"If we are going to submit to international action it ought to be based on justice," he said. "I supported it because I felt we could always impose our veto in a way to insure justice, that we might gradually get a law which would define what aggression is. . . .

"The United Nations went at it backward. It created a police force before there was a law to enforce. . . .

"At Dumbarton Oaks there was little justice in the Charter. Senator Vandenberg wrote a lot more justice into it at San Francisco. It is unfortunate that this question

Truman Crosses Path Taken In 1492 by Columbus' Ships

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Aboard the Missouri, Sept. 15.—Sailing the sparkling Sargasso Sea, Truman crossed path of Columbus' discovery voyage this afternoon. Tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock the Missouri, which left Rio September 7 will be 1000 miles due east of Miami. Moving at only 15 knots, she will reach Norfolk around noon Friday.

The President spent the morning watching firing of the 16-inch guns near the bow and catapaulting and recovery of two planes at the stern.

He commented "some show" as the exercises were concluded.

This morning the bright cobalt waters were marked by spots and streaks of saffron seaweed. This is a characteristic of Sagasso Sea and it was sighting of such seaweed that revived the waning hopes of Columbus' worried sailors.

Their hopes bore fruit a few days later when they sighted land October 12, 1492, which is the island of San Salvador.

The feature of these waters which presumably accounts for the great quantities of seaweed is the fact there is scarcely any current. Here the surface water travels only three miles a day as compared with about 60 miles a day of the Gulf Stream off Miami.

Plot to Slay Benes, Seize Power Foiled

Innocent, Say All

Trial Set For Himmler Killer Squad

Nuernberg, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP).—A group of 23 former SS and gestapo men, known as "Himmler's murder squad," and charged with killing more than 1 million persons, was arraigned today before an American court. All pleaded innocent, and trial was set for September 29.

Two were stricken at the hearing. Otto Rasch, a former SS (elite guard) brigadier general, shook like a leaf with an attack of Parkinson's disease (paralysis agitans, or shaking palsy) and had t oleave the courtroom. When Eduard Strauch, SS colonel, arose t oplead innocent, he fell in a fit of epilepsy.

The prosecution charged the defendants killed Jews, Gypsies, Russians, and others considered racially inferior to the Nazis. They were designated the Einsatz commands, and the prosecution claims that Heinrich Himmler organized them solely for murder.

They followed in the wake of the German army, especially on the Russian front. The indictment said one defendant, Maj. Gen. Otto Ohlendorf, admitted 90,000 murders for his group alone.

State of Slovakia Reports Arrest of 80 Ringleaders

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 15 (AP).—A terrorist plot to overthrow the national government and assassinate President Eduard Benes has been thwarted with arrest of 80 ringleaders, the state of Slovakia announced today.

The national ministry of the interior here immediately began an investigation to determine whether the plot was connected with the unsuccessful attempt last week to bomb Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, Vice Premier Peter Zenkl and Justice Minister Prokop Drtina. Envelopes containing explosives, addressed to the three officials, were intercepted by officials.

The Slovakian Ministry of the Interior said many of the 80 arrested were employed by the government. Their names were not published, but they were said to include ringleaders of an armed group having branches in the leading Slovakian cities.

They were described as including former members of the Hlinka band, which was the strong-arm body of the pro-Nazi puppet state of Slovakia headed by the late Dr. Joseph Tiso, and former followers of Gen. Andrei Vlassov, Russian general who surrendered to the Nazis and fought on their side for a time. Dr. Tiso was hanged last April for crimes against the Czech republic.

The Hlinka and Vlassov bands once terrorized the Slovakian countryside but finally went underground.

The announcement said the plot was nipped after a confession by a former Vlassov terrorist, who had served with a German SS Panzer division during the war and later with SS troops seeking to stamp out a Slovakian revolution.

The scheme, as pieced together by investigators, was to carry out sabotage throughout the whole country, capping a reign of terror with an attempt on Benes' life.

The communique said the plotters also planned to incorporate in their organization roving Benderovici terror bands. (Members of these bands have claimed to be followers of a White Russian, anti-Soviet Gen. Bendera.)

Council Drops Greek Issue To Give Assembly Free Hand

Yugoslavia and Bulgaria and to mak recommendations "it deems appropriate under the circumstances." And it instructed the secretary-general to place all evidence at the disposal of the Assembly.

Gromyko described it as "crude diplomacy and a very crude method."

He objected that it would mean the Security Council "confesses its inability to solve" the stalemated problem, and that it would weaken the council.

Bitter Debate Set Off

It set off a bitter debate on parliamentary procedures involved which had even the Council members confused. The United States maintained the resolution was one merely involving procedure, and therefore not subject to the veto.

Gromyko insisted the resolution was "substantive" having to do with the Guerilla warfare itself, and therefore subject to veto by the five permanent members of the council. Only Oscar Lange of Poland supported him; once on the original issue resolution, and the second time on a vote to determine if members considered it "procedural" or "substantive."

The second resolution, also offered by the United States, asking to drop it from the Council's agenda entirely, and again Soviet Russia and Poland voted against it. But this time, Gromyko chose not to make a formal veto of his negative vote, and the majority won.

Since the Greek border problem has been on the Security Council's agenda for months, it was one of the few international issues on which the assembly was not free to recommend any course of action. The Charter provides that the assembly may not make a recommendation on any problem which is before the Security Council at the same time.

Assembly Can Now Act

Only one exception is provided—in case the Security Council itself asks the assembly for advice. This is what the American delegation tried to achieve in its first resolution which encountered today's two Soviet vetoes.

As soon as the American proposal for the direct request was defeated, only one course was left to Herschel V. Johnson, the American delegate. This was to get the Council to drop the matter from its agenda altogether, so as to leave the Assembly a free hand.

The American delegation is anxious above all to have the Greek issue thoroughly aired in the Assembly, where no veto applies. To achieve this purpose, and to get a majority vote for a strong Assembly recommendation, it was thought worthwhile to lose the quieting effect of the Security Council's group of observers now in Greece.

East, and Allen Lawrence.

The way is now open for the Assembly to recommend the creation of a much stronger, permanent commission with an international staff to watch conditions along the Greek border. If the Security Council later declines to carry out the recommendation, Greece can always invite the countries supporting her in the Assembly to send such a commission anyway.

Today's 5¾-hour debate in the Security Council was a good example of how procedural and parliamentary tactics are used to accomplish important diplomatic ends.

It brought charges from Gromyko that the United States, Great Britain, France and China were violating the five-power agreement at San Francisco in 1945 which tried to describe how the great powers' veto could be used.

Veto Is Major Issue

It also raised once more the American and other objections to Soviet use of the veto in the past year. This is sure to be one of the major issues in the coming Assembly debates, and it bobbed up in aggravated form today on the very eve of the Assembly session.

The Charter provides that the great powers must be unanimous any issue of substance, but do not need to be unanimous on an issue of mere procedure. But what is substantive, and what procedural?

The great powers' agreement of 1945—never accepted by the smaller nations—ruled that even a decision to send a commission of inquiry was a substantive question, subject to a veto, since it might start a "chain of events" leading to ultimate action against an agressor.

It lso provided for the socalled "double veto" which was used by Russia today, and once before when the issue of Franco Spain was before the Security Council last year.

ing agent for the United States Government, which will add the British gold to its present holdings of $21,814,940,000, about one-fifth the world's stock of monetary gold.)

Sale of some gold from Britain's reserve was forecast by Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer, last month shortly after sterling convertibility was suspended and Britain and the United States virtually froze the remaining 400 million dollars of the American loan.

Snyder declared "there might well be important need for "interim aid" for most of Europe while the Marshall aid plan is being drafted. He indicated the remainder of the American loan may soon be made available to Britain—a move that would relieve temporarily the need for further sales of gold.

The U. S. Treasury chief said the unspent portion of the American loan had not been permanently frozen, and added the United States was not insisting upon complete restoration of sterling convertibility before the remaining 400 million dollars is turned over to the British.

Sterling convertibility—exchanging British pounds earned by current transactions into United States dollars on demand of any of Britain's creditors—was expended August 20, when Britain found the drain was rapidly exhausting the loan.

slav officers on the old armistice line.

Man's Head Blown Off

A grenade blew off a man's head tonight in the square that was named, ironically, "the place of unity." Earlier this afternoon four bullets fired from a window killed a Yugoslav.

An angry Italian mob beat up a British writer and stripped his woman companion. The couple had been reading a Communist newspaper and apparently were mistaken for Yugoslavs.

American correspondents were chased by the same mob. One correspondent was knocked down, then stoned by young Italians as he ran for shelter.

British Brig. W. Johnson's car was stoned. Another mob halted chief laison officer to the American Military Government, pulled him out of his jeep and manhandled him.

Three grenades were thrown into a cafe on the outskirts of Trieste, injuring one man seriously. Reports from Pola, the former Italian city turned over the the Yugoslavs under the peace treaty, said two Yugoslav officers who arrived to take over the administration tomorrow were roughed up by a gang of youths.

Trolleys, Buses Damaged

Several streetcars and buses were damaged. The Italian Monfalcone shipyards and virtually all Italian shops were closed. They displayed signs: "Closed for national mourning."

Shops were open in the Communist San Giacomo district and many Trieste housewives shopped there to avoid crowds in the center of the city.

Paris Parley Overrides U. S. On Aid Report

Paris, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—Delegates to the 16-nation conference decided tonight that, despite American objections, Europe's needs for economic aid and mutual cooperation are too urgent to delay any longer the publication of their report.

In a hastily-drafted resolution suggested by the French delegate, Herve Alphand, the conference revealed resentment at the manner in which Marshall Plan aid has been offered to them.

It protested that under the present circumstances it has been impossible for the conference to assemble complete details on member nations' individual economic programs and to meet all the other last-minute objections raised by the American representatives here.

Alphand proposed that the conference clean up its work and begin to put some of its plans into immediate execution. He said France was ready to enter into customs unions with any other European countries with complementing economies.

He proposed that the more detailed information requested by the United States might be assembled at a later meeting of committee economic experts.

When Sir Oliver Franks, the British delegate and president of the executive committee of the conference, was asked whether the United States had been consulted on Alphand's resolution, he replied "No." He added that the conference leaders had no intention of consulting the United States on this decision. He said the executive comittee might discuss the matter later.

Will Clayton, American Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs, had suggested to Sir Oliver last week that the United States would like more concrete guaranties than are included in the present conference report. He had asked particularly that each member nation give proofs that it was getting the maximum out of its national resources and production as well as cleaning financial house by budgetary reforms and anti-inflation measures. Sir Oliver had said these guaranties could be counted on.

Some of these assurances were proposed i nthe form of a five-point pledge put forward by the French delegate. France suggested that all 16 nations subscribe to the same pledge. But there was reluctance on the part of the British and Scandinavian delegates, who said a similar pledge was currently being drawn up by a conference drafting committee. And they do not want to destroy the "unanimity" that has been achieved on the committee's version with such great difficulty.

Officials Inspect Brookmont Area

Four Montgomery County officials yesterday toured the community of Brookmont, near Bethesda, Md., where residents have complianed of a lack of civic improvements.

Brooke Johns, president of the County Commissioners, led the tour, which was requested by the Civic League of Brookmont. The commissioners, however, have previously denied that they are responsible for many of the conditions.

County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr, who accompanied President Johns, said some of the conditions complained about, varying from inadequate streets and sidewalks to traffic hazards and poor street lighting, could be improved.

Creedon Receives Complaints on Rent Advisers

Two telegrams were sent yesterday to Housing Expeditor Frank R. Creedon, protesting the absence of tenants' representatives among nominees to the Arlington-Alexandria Rent Control Advisory Board.

Members of the board were nominated by Governor Tuck of Virginia last week, but Creedon's office, which has the appointive power, said the names have not been officially received there.

Mrs. Martha Strain, chairman of the Arlington Consumer Council, asked Creedon to "request Governor Tuck to remedy the situation by additional nominations or substitution of tenants to insure fair representation."

David Carliner, president of the Fillmore Gardens Tenants Association, said Governor Tuck should nominate a board "in which the tenants and fixed income groups here can have confidence.

Woman Is Badly Burned When Bed Catches Fire

A 36-year-old woman was seriously burned at the Lord Calvert Hotel in College Park, Md., yesterday, when her bed caught fire after she went to sleep while smoking a cigarette, police said.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Opal Starr of Memphis, Tenn., who checked in early yesterday. Mrs. Starr was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital with first degree burns of the face, arms and chest. Occupants of nearby rooms extinguished the fire, which was confined to the bed, before the arrival of Branchville fire apparatus.

Tobin Plans Test Of Denham Ruling

First Case

Baltimore Employers Accuse ITU

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—The International Typographical Union (AFL) and the Baltimore Typographical Union No. 12 faced charges before the National Labor Relations Board today that they are violating the Taft-Hartley law by refusing to bargain collectively.

Regional NLRB director Ross M. Madden announced that the charges were filed by the Graphic Arts League, a group of 22 Baltimore print shops.

This was believed to be the first action brought against the ITU since its president, Woodruff Randolph, instructed delegates to the national convention last month not to sign any more written contracts with employers.

The league's charges asserted the unions "entered upon and engaged in a preconceived and continuous plan and course of action for the purpose of violating the provisions of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947."

The companies listed a number of union acts they contended were evidence of failure to bargain collectively in good faith.

Among these were refusal "to execute any written contract incorporating any agreement reached, although requested to do so by the employers"; insistence that the employers accept the general laws of the ITU, "which contain provisions in violation of the (Taft-Hartley) Act," as "conditions of employment"; and "refusal to meet with the employers for the purpose of negotiating new contracts."

Current contracts between the league's shops and the printers expire September 30.

Rebel General, Followers Held In Venezuela

Caracas, Venezuela, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The government of President Romulo Betancourt announced today that Gen. Jose Antonio Gonzales and 66 followers had been arrested for participating in the revolt against the government that was suppressed last Friday.

A government communique said the plotters conspired with the leaders of the Conservative (Copei) Party in a plan to seize power by attacking Venezuela from neighboring Colombia.

General Gonzales, an official in the former Gomez and Lopez Contreras presidencies, was said to have entered western Tachira state from Colombia last Thursday with a group of followers.

The revolutionaries attacked garrisons in at least 10 communities, the communique said, with three persons killed and seven wounded in the fighting.

AFL Teamsters' Head Complies With Law On Anti-Red Oath

Indianapolis, Sept. 15 (AP).—Dan-ile J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL), announced tonight that he has signed the non-Communist affidavit required by the Taft-Hartley Law and planned court action if necessray for the right to use services of the National Labor Relations Board.

The recent action by John L. Lewis, head of the powerful United Mine Workers, in blocking signing of the affidavit by the American Federation of Labor executive council would bar all AFL unions from appealing to the NLRB under a ruling by Robert Denham, attorney for the board.

Tobin said Joseph A. Padway, Teamsters Union counsel who conferred with Tobin here today, would appear before the NLRB in Washington tomorrow to contend that the union was entitled to use the NLRB despite Denham's ruling.

The union president said that if the board refused Padway's plea the union would enter mandamus or injunction proceedings in Federal Court to override Denham's ruling.

Tobin said the union contended it was a completely autonomous body within the AFL and could not legally be refused the use of the NLRB by the executive council action.

Rubber Workers Head Would Try New Law

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—The president of the 220,000 member CIO-United Rubber Workers suggested today that organized labor "may as well get into" the Taft-Hartley law and if its workings "bog down" seek the backing of the American people to defeat it.

Al S. Buckmaster of Akron, offered his proposal to 600 delegates at the opening session of a convention, reported by some delegates to be split over full denouncing of the statute or use of its procedures.

The international president charged that the National Association of Manufacturers "spent millions to put on a campaign to turn the minds of the American people against labor, and added:

"We can show the public that the objectives of organized labor are the objectives of the American people."

Another Doesn't Agree

Joseph A. Salerno, president of the Massachusetts CIO, told the spread ourselves too thin on political action.

"We ought to pick out 75 Congressmen among the worst reactionaries and a given number of the same in the Senate and concentrate on defeating them," Salerno said.

Agency Council To Discuss Union With City Chest

Proposed consolidation of the Council of Social Agencies and the Washington Community Chest will be discussed by members of the delegate body of the council and members-at-large, at a meeting Wednesday.

No conclusive action at the noon gathering at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., is planned, according to Mrs. Catherine H. Norton, executive secretary of the council. However, a second meeting is scheduled for October, when a vote will be taken.

The proposal to combine the two agencies was recommended by the executive committee of the Chest board and the board of directors of the council on August 29. It calls for a 12-member board of trustees for a "Chest-Council," with an executive committee and five standing committees.

Detroit, Sept. 14(AP).—The Ford Motor Co. was reported tonight to have completed negotiations with the Navy for a lease on the huge 30-million-dollar Naval arsenal at suburban Centerline.

Confirmation was lacking from both Ford and Navy offices at Washington, but it was said here the company was prepared to move its parts manufacturing and service departments into the arsenal shortly.

A small car owned by William B. Beebee of 719 22d st. nw., was damaged when a large elm tree crashed down on it. Another car, owned by Hope Meely, 937 Rhode Island ave. nw., was heavily damaged by a toppled tree.

A large ventilator on the kitchen of the Maystat Tavern, 1628 L st. nw., broke loose, but caused little damage.

Driveways Blocked

Falling trees blocked the driveway at the rear of the National Rifle Association, 16th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., and at 2515 I st. nw. Other downed trees and limbs caused temporary traffic congestion at 1300 21st st. nw., 1200 16th st. nw., 1607 M st. nw., 2500 15th st. nw., 12th and O sts. nw. and 9th and R sts. nw.

A power line went down in Cabin John, cutting off about 20 consumers. Another was down briefly at Douglas and Kenilworth aves. ne.

Over the Nation, there was a 90-degree contrast in temperatures —103 degrees at Las Vegas, Nev., and 13 at Big Piney, Wyo. While a flow of chill air moved toward the Atlantic Coast, the Southwest continued hot with 102 degrees at Yuma, Ariz., and 100-degree readings in the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys.

Navy Evacuating Planes From Washington Area

The Navy yesterday began evacuation of virtually all its aircraft in the Washington area as a precaution against the Atlantic hurricane.

Naval Reserve planes, totaling about 90, were taken to Harrisburg, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y., by Reserve pilots who had just completed a two-week training course at the Naval Air Station. Regular Navy aircraft at the air station are being taken to Harrisburg.

The Army air installations at Andrews Field and Bolling Field are awaiting further information before moving planes.

New Type Insulin Developed to Aid Diabetic Persons

New York, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Development of a new type of insulin, promising more lasting relief for diabetic persons, was announced tonight on the eve of the American Chemical Society meeting.

The new compound is expected to reduce the number of injections of insulin required by diabetics to one every 24 hours—and the development may lead even to a better compound, one that may be effective for 48 hours.

Some persons suffering from diabetes now must take insulin two to four times a day.

The new compound was announced by Drs. Richard G. Roberts, Doris M. Hilker and Adrain Gasior-Russell of the biochemistry department of the Chicago Medical School.

It was pointed out that the new insulin-type has another advantage in that it does not cause "protein reaction" as sometimes occurs in the use of plain insulin.

Non-Red Affidavit Called Insulting

Indianapolis, Sept. 14 (AP).—W. P. Kennedy of Cleveland, general secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said tonight that "the non-Communist affidavit requirement of the Taft-Hartley Act is hateful to the American concept of freedom."

The requirement "is just as insulting to any patriotic American as if the law required a union officer to file an affidavit that he is not a chicken thief or a murderer," Kennedy told delegates to the state meeting of the BRT and its auxiliary.

and keep themselves informed of its movements.

The American Red Cross placed its disaster committees on call and military services begn to move airplanes out of the threatened zone.

As these developments marked the steady northwestward or west-northwestward progress of the hurricane, Army hurricane hunters searched the distant Atlantic far to the east of the Windward Islands where a second storm appeared to be in formative stages.

The mighty storm now raging northward of the Bahamas originated in the same general area five days ago.

Main islands of the Bahamas are being skirted by the tropical disturbance, but gale winds and high seas were expected at Abaco and Grand Bahama Island, with squalls approaching gale force in the Berry Islands.

A freakish characteristic of the big blow—the formation of a double eye, with two separate cores—had disappeared in late penetrations by Army and Navy hurricane hunters into its relatively calm center.

Pastor Forms Non-Caucasian Organization

Madison, Wis., Sept. 15—(AP)—A Unitarian minister who declared yesterday that "I will cross the line and throw my lot in with the people of color," has founded an organization opn to all non-Caucasians.

The Rev. Kenneth L. Patton, 44-year-old pastor of First Unitarian Society Church and father of four blond, blue-eyed children, said he claimed a trace of Indian blood and decidd to take the step as a means of helping to eliminate "silly, vicious discrimination of the colored peoples."

Patton declared he would found an organization to be called "the united colored race of the world," with mmbership open to Negroes, Orientals and Indians.

"During the years of my life I have become increasingly irritated, evn disgusted, at the behavior of the so-called white people into whose group I was accidentally born," he said. ". . . After all, I have some Indian blood in me and according to common prejudice that makes me all Indian. Why do I have to be a member of the white race if I don't want to be, . . . I think I will declare in favor of what color I have and join the colored people.

"The next time I apply for a clergy (railway courtesy) pass I'm going to fill it in colored, not white. And wherever such a question appears, I am going to answer colored. In fact, I'm going to do everything in my power to jam up machinery whereby this silly and vicious discrimination of the colored peoples is allowed to carry on."

Bread Up 4 Cents

Windsor, Ontaria, Sept. 15 (INS). The Essex County Bakers Association announced today that the price of bread here will go up 4 cents a loaf, to 14 cents, effective tomorrow.

New Code Proposed for Radio Cutting Time of Commercials

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP). A proposed new code for radio broadcasting was submitted today at the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters, but there was a possibility it might meet objections from some individual stations.

The new code, NAB officials estimated, would cut the time of commercial announcements on an average of 4 to 20 per cent. It would hit some programs by an even larger percentage, particularly so-called "shoppers' guide" and musical clock programs and disc jockey programs.

The proposed standards of practice also would lay down a set of restrictions governing matters of taste. The code includes a series of "should nots" for crime and mystery programs—including anything that might tend to make crime sound attractive, or the use of "horror for horror's sake."

There would be flat bans on certain types of advertising—including hard liquor, fortune telling, matrimonial agencies, any "dopester" tip sheet or race track publications and weight-reducing preparations.

Final action on the code is up to the board of directors, but the members at their session tomorrow can take a vote of approval or disapproval if they wish.

New England GOP Friendly To Dewey

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 15 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey ended a two-day Massachusetts visit with assurances from New England Republican leaders that they were friendly toward his unannounced candidacp for the GOP presidential nomination.

They carefully avoinded formal commitments to the New Yorker, however, and it was understood that he pressed for none. Rather, he appeared content to try to make a good impression upon both the public, at the Eastern Exposition, and political leaders in private huddles.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), who is expected to be the Bay State's "favorite son" candidate at the national convention next June, said at a news conference that Dewey had "a great many friends in Massachusetts, but he added that Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower and Senator Robert Taft also had friends in this State.

Massachusetts will send an unpledged delegation to the convention, Saltonstall predicted.

Gov. Robert F. Bradford (R.) of Massachusetts expressed the opinion that the State's 35 delegates would go to the convention pledged to Salstonstall in a "favorite son" role.

Republican Governors Ernest W. Gibson of Vermont, James L. McConaughy of Connecticnt and Charles M. Dale of New Hampshire told reporters that sentiment had not crystalized in their States but that Dewey appeared to have substantial strength.

Gov. Horace Hildreth, Maine Republican, and Gov. John O. Pastore, Rhode Island Democrat, did not attend the exposition.

Dewey, speaking at a luncheon given the governors, urged American farmers to continue their high production in order to feed the hungry overseas and at the same time provide for the Nation's domestic needs.

Truman Sees Big Guns Fire

Margaret stood on open deck in hot sunshine five levels above the main deck this morning as five salvos from three of the largest guns in the world threw eleven 2700-pound shells 8 miles.

Momentary Shudder

The shock of the tremendous propelling explosives made the 55,000-ton ship shudder momentarily and heat from the muzzles swept across the presidential party.

The six-foot projectiles were plainly visible as they arched in high trajectory toward the destroyer Dyess, directly to starboard on the horizon 7½ miles away. After a 35-second interval, during much of which the express train sound of shells could be heard aboard the Missouri, they splashed about 1000 yards astern the Dyess as planned.

Mr. Truman was to have fired one salvo today but the portable mechanism failed after an earlier satisfactory test and the guns were set off in the plot room amidships.

Taft Assails U. N. Charter has been precipitated by the use of the veto so frequently so early in the game."

Taft repeatedly stressed that there should be "A basic international law defining aggression."

"If you could get that, then I would favor eliminating the veto," he said. "Until then, I would not favor eliminating the veto."

Asked how he would define aggression, he said there is a definition of aggression in the South American treaty, "but I wouldn't want to define it now."

Arriving overnight from Santa Cruz, Calif., Taft launched a series of conferences with local political leaders before making two speeches here tomorrow on the record of the Eightieth Congress.

Under fire from Eastern industrialists for discussing possible liberalizing changes in the closed shop ban with Harry Lundeberg, head of the AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific, Taft backed up today on what reporters understood his position to be.

Taft said today he would not favor "any basic change" in the closed shop provision at the present time, though he thought as "a last resort" a joint congressional committee might consider some changes affecting the maritime industry as a special case.

Plans More Talks

Taft said he will talk further with Lundeberg and West Coast shipowners in San Francisco Friday on Lundeberg's proposals. Lundeberg wants the "hiring hall" system of recruiting seamen written into a new contract, but ship owners fear it may violate the Taft-Hartley Act.

Taft said he told Lundeberg (1) that if the ship owners and AFL sailors agreed, he thought the "hiring hall" might be continued under present law and (2) an alternative might be for the sailors to vote a union shop. He said he thought Lundeberg was "confused" on the second point.

"I told him that if there was no recourse I would be glad to have this question taken up by a joint committee studying the labor law and consider the possibility of an amendment."

He stressed that he now believes that any such amendment should be limited to the maritime industry.

Secretary of Commerce Harriman's Cleveland, Ohio, appeal to the American people to "voluntarily reduce" their consumption of meat meanwhile brought this comment from Taft:

"That's just what I suggested the other day (eat less meat, eat less extravagantly) that created so much excitement."

Taft, although thoroughly canvassing Taft sentiment in this State, told reporters that "under no circumstances" would he enter the California primaries next year. It is generally understood that California's 53 GOP convention delegates will go to Philadelphia next June pledged to Gov. Earl Warren, without strings.

Ohio CIO Council Calls For Taft's Resignation

Cleveland, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Ohio CIO Council today demanded the resignation of Senator Robert A. Taft and said "millions of eager citizens" would sign petitions asking the Ohio Republican Senator and potential presidential candidate to quit.

At its ninth annual State convention here, the council charged Taft with "disservice to Ohio and the Nation," and said that half a million Ohio CIO members would circulate the petitions demanding his recall.

"We call for an end to Robert Alphonso Taft's philosophy of government which is predicated on the bitter assumption that government is of big business, by big business and for big business," a unanimously-approved resolution stated.

Eat Less Meat Plan Pushed

clared that a reduction in meat consumption in this country is the best of three ways by which Europe can be provided with the food necessary to make the Marshall Plan for Europe's recovery work. The alternative, he said, is "anarchy and chaos" in the world.

The other two ways, Harriman said, are:

(1) To reinstitute Government controls. "Even if it were considered desirable to do so," he said, adequate controls could "hardly be established in time to be effective this year."

(2) To bid up the price of wheat to a point where it will not be profitable to feed it to animals. Harriman called this "impracticable from the standpoint of our own economy." It might, he said, set off another spiral of increases of prices in all fields..

Cites Substitutes

"Since we are well supplied with hay, soybeans and cottonseed meal and a still substantial corn crop, I believe that if wheat is not abnormally diverted to feed animals in this country, there will still be adequate supplies of animal products at more reasonable prices for our own people provided we are careful in our consumption."

Dodd, who has just returned from the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization meeting at Geneva, reported conditions in Europe worse than at any time since the war ended.

"There will be more people in the world hungry this winter than well fed," he predicted. He added that famine already was stalking parts of India.

A combination of unfavorable weather last winter and this summer played hob with Europe's crops, he said, with the situation much worse than it was on an earlier visit a few months ago.

GOP Leaders Sidestep Talk Of Convention Midwest Bloc

Omaha, Sept. 15 (AP).—Midwest and Rocky Mountain Republican leaders, adopting resolutions at closed sessions today of the Midwest Republican State Chairmen's Association, side-stepped premeeting talk of a Midwest bloc at the next Republican convention.

Adopted was a resolution stating "We stand for an open convention without dictation at Philadelphia next June. The Republican delegates selected by the people will make the Republican choice for President and Vice President."

A. T. (Bert) Howard, chairman of the 19-State association, had declared prior to the meeting the Midwest States represented hoped to show a united front at the Philadelphia convention next year.

Harry Crane, Topeka, Kans., chairman of the resolutions committee, told a news conference at which copies of the resolution were released that under no circumstances could 19 States be committed to any one presidential candidate. He stated, however, that conferences of chairmen and vice chairmen in the 19-State area will bring them "close enough so they can and will talk together" at the convention.

Other points in the resolution commended Congress for enactment of the Taft-Hartley labor law and urged an educational campaign to explain "the basic principles of the act."

In a section dealing with foreign relief, the group stated "until the President secures the facts and we know what countries of the world actually need to restore self-help to themselves, and we know our ability to help, it is futile to call Congress together or to try to discuss intelligently world commitments."

The resolution demanded that President Truman "take the people into his confidence" on foreign relief matters.

Names of prospective GOP presidential candidates had not figured in the deliberations today, Crane said.

Foreign Policy Seen As Big Issue in 1948

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said yesterday the people are losing confidence in the Nation's foreign policy and predicted it will be "the big issue" in next year's election campaign.

Talking t oreporters, he said foreign policy will be the major campaign issue "because the people are becoming confused and discouraged and disillusioned over the inability of our government and other governments t osettle problems—or even make a beginning."

He also said the people "more and more" are becoming conscious that high prices are due to the "tremendous quantities" of foods and materials being shipped to other nations.

He said they also "are getting tired of being taxed for such big expenditures in foreign countries," especially when they feel international problems are not close to settlement.

U. S. Asks Grain Exchanges to Hike Margins

In a sudden move to halt the wild, runaway markets in grain, the Government last night called upon the Nation's grain exchanges to more than double the already high margins for all speculative transactions.

The appeal was made in a telegram from the Commodity Exchange Authority of the Department of Agriculture to the Chicago Board of Trade and exchanges in Kansas City and Minneapolis.

The Government asked the exchanges to raise cash down payments for new dealings to one third the purchase price. They also asked that traders be required to maintain their margins at all times at 20 per cent.

The request came on the heels of two margin increases put into effect last week voluntarily by the exchanges. If the Government wishes are carried out, margins will be increased as follows:

Wheat, from 45 cents a bushel to 90 cents to $1.

Corn, from 45 cents to 80 to 90 cents.

Oats, from 25 cents to about 40 cents a bushel.

Other grains will be raised in about the same proportion.

The action was taken, according to a statement by Joseph M. Mehl, administrator of the Comodity Exchange Authority, to "prevent a boom-and-bust situation in grain futures resulting from thinly-margained accounts."

Mehl warned the exchanges that their failure to grant a Government request several months ago was responsible for the present hectic market.

The Government request came after another day of wildly gyrating grain prices. Some wheat futures jumped the full 10-cents a bushel—the limit allowed for one day's trading.

Corn again set a new all-time record, with September corn closing at $2.65½. September oats closed at $1.21.

Keeping pace with grain was livestock. In Chicago a new top price for the season was paid for cattle, heavy steers commanding $35.60 a hundred. Hogs were slightly higher.

fixing agreements tending to up the cost of living.

3. In Providence, R. I., Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.), chairman of a price investigating subcommittee, said it might be necessary to restore the wartime order diverting grain from large-scale use by distillers.

Wants Liquor Curbs

4. Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) told a news conference here that curbs on liquor production, restrictions on the milling of flour, and prohibition of "speculative hoarding" by restrictions on the amount of supplies than can be held in warehouses should be re-imposed.

5. Brewster likewise called for reduction in food shipments abroad. He insisted the Truman Administration has allowed the food export program "to run riot." He urged President Truman to take the lead in a voluntary food conservation program and suggested as a slogan "Save Food to Save America."

6. Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) echoed Brewster's charge that the food export program has "run riot." Reminded that the Joint Committee on the Economic Report had not found exports the cause of food shortages here Capehart said he did not agree with the finding and was having his own staff make an independent inquiry. He said he had also asked his staff to look into speculative hoarding.

Two Va. Industrial Schools Ask $225,000 Budget Boost

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—Governor Tuck and his advisers began their biennial labors on the State budget today and, as anticipated, ran into requests for sizable appropriations' increases at the first two institutions thy visited.

Tuck, the eight members of his budget dvisory commission and Budget Director J. H. Bradford spent the afternoon on an inspection tour of the two industrial schools for Negro boys and girls in Hanover County.

Officials of both schools presented budget proposals that, together, would call for an increase of some $225,000 for maintenance and operation in the 1948-1950 biennium.

The Virginia Manual Labor School for Negro boys asked for $415,395, or $162,887 more than the $252,508 appropriated for the current biennium.

to cope The Virginia Industrial School for Negro Girls sought $176,175, an increase of $64,966 over the $111,209 carried in the present budget.

The increases in each case would go mainly for personal services, to augment the present staffs of teachers and other workers at the institutions, which have recently been described as being understaffed and otherwise inadequate to cope with the problems of rehabilitation delinquent youths.

A spokesman for the Governor reported that the budget group made a thorough inspection of physical facilities at the two institutions.

Tonight, the Governor and his budget group met at the Capitol to hear requests from three organizations—the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, the Travelers' Aid Society of Roanoke and the Viriginia branch of the National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers.

On 3 Counts

Three Youths Plead Guilty In Fairfax

Three youths pleaded guilty in Fairfax yesterday to three counts of housebreaking, while Washington police stood by to press separate charges. Their cases were referred to the probation officer.

Captured in Fredericksburg Saturday in connection with an attempted housebreaking there, Wilbur E. Riddle, 21, Falls Church, and Clarence Geier, 19, and Joseph Herzog, 19, who said they came from Wausau, Wis., admitted three recent Fairfax housebreakings and a $2000 safe robbery in Washington, police said.

A fourth man, who was not charged by Fairfax authorities, was to be returned to Washington today for questioning in the safe robbery, at the National Brick & Supply Co., Terra Cotta, on August 30. Washington police said they have sent detainers to Fairfax on the other three men for their alleged part in the robbery.

Indictments against Riddle, Herzog and Geier were handed down yesterday on the three housebreakings, all in Fairfax during the past week. Biggest job attributed t othem netted $750 from a Centerville store-postoffice.

Judge Paul E. Brown sat in the case.

Others indicted at yesterday's opening session of the fall term were: Jerry G. Ray, Newton, N. C.; William Escalante, no fixed address; John C. Anderson, Baltimore; all for housebreaking.

Donald M. Pierce, Wilmington, Del.; Clark C. Brown, 1660 Avon pl., nw.; Willie Jenkins, no fixed address; Starlis N. Morris, all for grand larceny; Pennington C. Wray, Annandale, felonious assault.

"It's as accurate as a railroad watch," Webber says. "It begins to bloom promptly at 7:30 each night, and produces from 16 to 32 blossoms by 8 o'clock." In four weeks of blooming it has produced 600 blossoms, he said.

Shippers Oppose Freight Rate Hike

By The Associated Press

For nearly six hours yesterday a procession of shippers expressed opposition to an increase of freight rates on their particular products or commodities.

The concensus of the witnesses, expressed at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on a proposed emergency 10 per cent hike of railroad rates, was this:

The carriers undoubtedly need additional revenue but "my product" can't stand any increase at all or, at least, not the full 10 per cent boost.

In most instances fear was expressed that a flat percentage increase would upset the freight rate structure, and put some shippers at a competitive disadvantage.

Represented was everything from slag to grapefruit, presentation Saturday.

C. & O. Drops Nickel Plate in Merger Plan

By The Associated Press

Young

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company yesterday tossed aside its controlling interest in its long-time affiliate, the Nickel Plate road, in order to press a plan for C. & O.'s eventual unification with the New York Central system.

The interest in Nickel Plate (officially, the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Company) will be distributed to individual C. & O. stockholders as a dividend.

Final details of the divestment were worked out as the Interstate Commerce Commission went forward with a hearing on the applications of Robert R. Young, Chesapeake board chairman, and Robert J. Bowman, Chesapeake president, for permission to accept seats on the New York Central board. The seats were offered them after C. & O. bought up six per cent of Central stock.

This Central stock is now held in a voting trust, and, as a part of the current proceedings, Chesapeake seeks authority to withdraw it from the trust and exercise full voting privileges.

Nickel Plate control is being given up as a requisite to approval of this plan, since Nickel Plate and Central are directly competing lines, which under the law may not become under common control.

C. & O's. 192,400 shares of Nickel Plate will be distributed to C. & O. stockholders of record of September 29. Actual distribution will be made November 10, on a basis of one Nickel Plate share for each 40 shares of C. & O. holdings.

"This will divest the C. & O. of all interest in the Nickel Plate," the announcement said.

Chrysler Corp. and Packard Motor Car Co. yesterday joined the Virginian Railway Co. and a number of Virginia and West Virginia communities in opposing the projected interlocking directorate for Chesapeake and Central.

Each pressed the contention that Central would lose "independence" in such a setup, with adverse effects on their respective interests.

Chest Merges To Be Discussed

Margarine Tax

In a letter published on this page on Monday Paul T. Truitt, a spokesman for the margarine producers, urges repeal of the inequitable taxes levied on margarine, not for the sake of revenue, but as a means of discouraging use of this nutritious butter substitute. The Washington Post has repeatedly advocated abolition of the discriminatory margarine excises which in effect amount to a subsidization of the dairy industry. But such appeals, which have come from many sources, have been futile because Congress has never had the courage to defy the organized opposition of the powerful dairy interests to repeal proposals. With butter prices now soaring to dizzy heights, however, the pressure to remove restrictions that hamper the sale of a much cheaper substitute for butter may conquer legislative fears of affronting the dairy interests. Since butter consumers control more votes than butter producers, even the most timid and subservient Congressmen may decide that it is wise to dispense with taxes that not only constitute an unfair impediment to competition, but also impede Government efforts to bring down living costs.

United Nations

The significance of the second regular session of the U. N.'s General Assembly which opens today requires no emphasis. The world is not yet even in a state of formal peace. Russia is clearly frustrating any peace-making until conditions force the dissolution of governments and the disintegration of any feeling for the established order. New aggression has taken the place of old, and it is lurking at a half dozen places in the Old World. The agency of the United Nations to which the world confided the authority to promote peace and avert war is in a state of paralysis. We mean, of course, the Security Council, which advertised its own impotence when Russia vetoed a plan to protect Greek independence which its own commission had recommended. These conditions add to the importance attaching to the General Assembly. It is to the Assembly that mankind is turning with a hope born of desperation that in this forum of the nations the world can demonstrate a moral entity sufficient to hold back the forces of evil.

It is gratifying to learn from Secretary Marshall's address on Sunday—a pronouncement of the first order—that this view of the Assembly is shared by the Administration. There was a time when disillusionment with the United Nations seemed to have seized our policy-makers. This was at the time of the mounting of the threat to Greek independence. But the common sense of the American people, together with the leadership of Senator Vandenberg, reversed the trend away from the United Nations, and Secretary Marshall's assurances could not be more explicit. Any course which would leave world power to a naked contest between Russia and America would be suicidal. The best course for this country is to keep its powder dry at the same time that (in Hobbes' word) it "endeavors" peace through the United Nations. That does not mean, as Secretary Marshall said, that every international problem should be handled by the United Nations. That is contrary to the Charter, which enjoins the nations to seek the solution of disputes by "negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means of their own choice." But it does mean that we must continue to regard our support of the United Nations as the "cornerstone of our foreign policy."

Secretary Marshall seems to have in his mind a policy for improving the Charter in the light of experience. He does not say what it is. Without venturing to guess the nature of his suggestions, we are gratified at this demonstration that we intend to go into the Assembly with a dynamic policy. Hitherto we have let the initiative go to other nations. This has seemed to put us either on the defensive, as in the matter of disarmament during the last session, or in a secondary role of supporter or opposer. It has been clear for months past that the Russians are intent on striving for leadership in the General Assembly. Having been successful, through the mere exercise of the veto power, in reducing the Security Council to a nullity, they are preparing to turn the guns of their propaganda upon the Assembly and through the Assembly upon world opinion. This is the best advertisement we can imagine of the new importance that is attached to the General Assembly. In open debate we have faith that truth will prevail.

It Spells Inflation

Investigators for the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report conclude that food prices, now about double prewar figures, are likely to go still higher owing to a short corn crop and the prospect of continued heavy food exports to Europe. However, the experts believe that present high food prices are chiefly attributable to the unprecedentedly high level of employment and of individual incomes. Exports, they say, have contributed somewhat to domestic food pressures but these have been mainly in respect to grains in which production has been very large.

In the light of the experts' analysis it is evident that the high cost of food is not a result of speculative manipulation, as Senator Ives assumes, although speculation is, of course, encouraged by the conditions that make for rising prices. Anything that can be done to curb speculative operations of the gambling type is all to the good. But it is a waste of time to look for scapegoats on whom to place responsibility for a price inflation resulting from an excess of purchasing power in consumer hands. The experts have at least done their best to destroy the illusion that high food prices are primarily due to profiteering by packers, chain stores and other distributors. For they assert that elimination of processor-distributor profits "would not appreciably affect the total cost of food to consumers." The chief beneficiaries of rising food prices have, in fact, been the farmers whose net incomes have risen much more rapidly than the incomes of the rest of the people.

The fact that our people continue to buy more and better food despite high prices—or at least have been doing so until recently—provides a clue to the source of our difficulties. We are experiencing the delayed effects of wartime inflationary financing, which were held in leash until price controls were lifted. The billions of dollars of accumulated purchasing power in consumer hands were only potentially inflationary so long as price controls and rationing restricted the amount that individuals could spend on needed goods. They became actively inflationary when those restrictions vanished.

Moreover, the inflationary impact of our export program has been much more severe than is generally realized. Indeed, we think that the report prepared for the use of the Joint Congressional Committee underrates the lifting effect of export demands on domestic prices, not only of foods but of other commodities. The Monthly Review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank points out that disbursements from foreign official accounts with the bank amounted to nearly five billion dollars in the first eight months of this year compared with only two and one half billion dollars in the whole of 1946. Most of these funds were obtained directly or indirectly from the Treasury in the form of loans to Great Britain, France and other countries, which used the proceeds to buy and withdraw scarce goods from our markets. Although the spending of borrowed funds did not increase banking reserves, the Review points out that it did result in a transfer of funds from taxpayers and investors to producers and sellers of goods. In short, buying for export helped to build up the incomes of farm and industrial producers, and made it easier to raise wages of the rank and file of the consuming public at a time when domestic supplies were being depleted by shipping goods abroad.

In addition countries in possession of gold and idle dollar balances have been using their holdings to pay for exports, thereby increasing the volume of domestic purchasing power. These payments, the New York Reserve Bank explains, "have considerably eased the pressure on bank reserves by offsetting in large measure the recurrent losses caused by Treasury net receipts and by redemptions of Government securities held by the Federal Reserve System." In other words, the Treasury's operations, which were designed to relieve inflationary pressures, have been partially nullified by the methods used in financing exports.

In stressing the markedly inflationary results of our unbalanced export trade our only purpose is to emphasize the danger of assuming that high prices can be fought without adequate control weapons. However abundant the supplies of food or other commodities may be, judged by the standards of past years, soaring prices are to be expected when the currency is inflated. Inflation is the root cause of our present troubles and in order to meet our foreign commitments without inviting further disastrous increases in the prices of essentials, rationing of basic commodities, primarily food, is in our opinion imperative.

AFL's Gromyko

There is something to be said for John L. Lewis' insistence on fighting the anti-Communist provision of the Taft-Hartley law as interpreted by NLRB Counsel Robert N. Denham. Mr. Lewis has certainly succeeded in dramatizing the absurdity of hinging the applicability of a general statute on one man's actions. Apparently he alone among the AFL hierarchy is holding out against signing an affidavit to the effect that he is not a Communist and not associated with any group working for overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence. But the effect is, under Mr. Denham's ruling, to deprive 43,000 local unions with AFL connections of the right to carry their cases before the NLRB. This doesn't make sense from any point of view.

Before saluting Mr. Lewis as a fearless leader of a worthy cause, however, it is well to remember that he is taking full advantage of a weak point in the Taft-Hartley Act in an effort to wreck the entire statute. No informed person believes that Mr. Lewis himself has any sympathy for the Communists and few would attribute to him any desire to defend the abstract principle of protecting bargaining rights without regard to ideologies. His primary concern is doubtless that of the wrecker. For that very reason it is inexcusably short-sighted to provide him with a weapon that he can readily wield with devastating effect.

At the time of its issuance we regarded Mr. Denham's interpretation of the Communist affidavit provision as unreasonably sweeping. Strict reading of the text does not require affidavits from the officers of labor federations, and the chief author of the act, Senator Taft, has said that there is no legislative history to back up the Denham interpretation. We hope, therefore, that Mr. Denham's view will be upset by the NLRB. It is the board itself, and not its general counsel, which has the final rule-making power, subject, of course, to review by the courts. The public interest would best be served by carrying a test case promptly before the NLRB and then before the courts. Regardless of what the decision of the NLRB may be, it is possible that the entire section dealing with the anti-Communist affidavit may be thrown out by the Supreme Court as an invidious encroachment upon constitutional rights.

Meanwhile, however, it is important that the Taft-Hartley Act go into operation with a minimum of friction. Nothing would delight the foes of all legislation designed to balance labor's privileges with appropriate obligations so much as a complete tie-up of all the machinery created by what they call the "slave labor" law. The best proof that the law has nothing in it remotely resembling slave labor requirements is to let the unions test it in actual operation. It would be ironical indeed if the Gromyko in the AFL's executive council or an arbitrary ruling by the general counsel of the NLRB should be permitted to prevent that test from being made.

R-Day

Conflict between Italians and Yugoslavs was inevitable as the Anglo-American forces which have hitherto been guarding the Morgan line in Venezia Giulia leave their positions today. The Morgan line was a temporary border set up under the so-called Dwino agreement pending the establishment of a permanent Italo-Yugoslav boundary by the peacemakers. It was named after the Allied commander in charge of war operations in Venzia Giulia, Gen. Sir Henry Morgan. The Allies had swarmed over the peninsula, and the Yugoslavs, embittered by memories of Mussolini's repression, had established themselves in the principal port, Trieste, where they proceeded to set up a city council. By a good deal of finesse General Morgan persuaded the Yugoslavs to agree upon occupation zones pending a territorial settlement at the peace conference. Trieste was evacuated, and left under British occupation, while the area north of Trieste was put under guard of American troops, the Eighty-eighth Division, which, under General Bryant Moore, has been exemplary. The Yugoslavs were given other positions to look after, but the chief task of the Anglo-American force has been to keep them in order, and to warn off their brothers in Yugoslavia proper. For the Yugoslavs behaved as if the whole of Italy's Venezia Giulia was their own.

The peace treaty, to which the Yugoslavs reluctantly attached their signature, did not accede to all of Yugoslav claims. But it gave them a good deal of Italian territory in Venezia Giulia, and over the hotly disputed Italian port of Trieste, it set up a Free Territory. Presiding over this there will be a governor appointed by U. N.'s Security Council. No appointment has yet been made, and, presumably, the area will be run in the interim by the military commanders of the Morgan line. It is not said how many of the troops they will retain in this enclave. Undoubtedly the problem, in spite of the peace treaty, will remain acute. The Yugoslavs still covet the territory that was denied them, and even if they do not make any overt aggression, they will try to reduce Trieste to unimportance. This they can do because they control the railroads feeding Trieste and can (and will) divert traffic to Fiume and Pola, both of which Italian ports are now in Yugoslav hands.

Perhaps the worst feature of the Trieste settlement was the denial to the Free Territory of the 50-mile strip to and including Pola, a purely Italian port. This would have given the Free Territory a viability that it now lacks. It would also have protected the value of Trieste as a seaport. Pola, with its 30,000 inhabitants, is now emptying itself of its Italians. They are afraid of what the vengeful Slovenes may do to them. At the Lausanne Conference after the last war Lord Curzon spoke of the transfer of populations as "the most vicious 'peace' solution I know of." There are many illustrations of it in the new peace settlements, and the spectacle of Pola is one of the saddest. But the chief preoccupation of the allied powers is today more practical than moral—in the conflict that is bound to ensue in connection with the effort to make the peace settlement stick.

HIGH NOON

Hushed in green summer's brooding heat
Leaves hang listless.. No bird calls.
In crevice and hole the crickets sleep.
Grasshoppers hide by the mossy walls.
Daisy, Queen Anne's lace, tangles of vetch
Vary the motionless waves of grasses.
Only the sun's wide shadow of clouds
Moves with high gliding cumulus masses . . .
Dark ships of flowering seas that pass
High over field and tree and boulder.
Quiet of summer noon is here,
Resting with us, warm shoulder to shoulder.

VA Discrimination

The Veterans' Administration notified us September 10, 1947, of a decision which is placing an unjustified hardship on thousands of veterans and many professional schools of high standing. In plain language here is the decision.

Veterans may go to liberal arts schools such as the University of Ohio and take a minimum 12-hour course a week and receive full subsistence, while a student who attends a strictly professional school which does not offer liberal arts courses must attend 25 hours a week for full subsistence.

Let us take for example Veterans A and B. Mr. B attends G. W. University and takes 12 hours a week of accountancy instruction and draws a full subsistence of $90 a month. Mr. A, his roommate, attends B. F. University, a school of accountancy. He takes 12 hours of class instruction a week in accountancy. He gets a half subsistence of $45. They do their study work together and cover the same subject matter and do the same amount of outside work. Mr. A fought just as hard as Mr. B and sees no justice. He feels he is entitled to $90 a month. We agree with him. Mr. A was registered at the B. F. University day school along with 500 other veterans September 10, 1947, when they are suddenly notified of the cut in subsistence. Other schools are filled and Mr. A and his 500 fellow veterans are forced to take one-half subsistence because the administrators of veterans cut their throats so slowly they can't fight the injustice nor can they find space at this late date in other crowded schools.

The Veterans' Administration has a remedy to get full subsistence. Just do as we say, make it 25 hours a week of instruction for all professional schools, be it barber school or school of accountancy. I wonder if the administrator realizes that a sudent of accountancy with a 12-hour load spends about 25 hours outside work in preparing for it.

The veterans want to know for whom the Veterans' Administration is administrating.

Stratton Bill

The Stratton bill, to open the quotas to admit 100,000 more immigrants per year is, in the minds of some of us, just another of those measures which has been introduced every year since the first Quota Act in 1921 with the idea of amending it to death. Among these was the ridiculous proposition of settling immigrants in Alaska with an immigartion quota between the 48 States and Alaska. The Stratton bill, if passed, will be utilized as the entering wedge for a horde of Japanese immigrants into the United States. Many Americans already have forgotten the horrors of Bataan and the rape of Nanking and the brutal treatment of the poor Canadian nurses in Hongkong.

Noisy Planes

How magnanimous of the Civil Aeronautics Administration to rule that after October 8 planes will have to fly 1000 feet above the highest obstacle rather than the present 1000 feet above ground level.

Whether the planes fly 1000 or 1100 feet will hardly make much difference to the millions of citizens who are being disturbed night and day by this unnecessary noise. Unless we wish this Nation to become completely neurotic, we should entrust the task of protecting the health of our people against the plane noises to the Surgeon General. Planes should fly at any distance, four, five or six thousand feet above the ground, to prevent people from being disturbed in their sleep or their work.

Bridging the Gap

From newspaper articles I read and radio announcements and commentaries I hear I get the impression that the United States and Russia are mentally miles apart and are drifting further away from each other; that as a consequence we blame them and they us for most everything under the sun, and we both prepare for the next armed conflict while being already in the midst of economic, political and psychological warfare.

I do not know how they view this situation in the USSR, but here it seems people are apt to throw up their hands in despair, meaning that we tried everything and that the Russians just don't want to play ball. I would not be a bit surprised if they argued the same way in Moscow. The question now in my mind and, I believe, in the minds of many other Americans, is, Have we tried everything?

If nuclear physicists were capable of opening up new vistas, cannot political, social and economic scientists and practitioners do likewise in their respective fields? We may have to try a good many blind alleys before reaching a thoroughfare to a peaceable solution of the present unarmed conflict, but the American and Russian governments owe this effort to their peoples who want to raise their children to live and enjoy this beautiful world.

Should the major powers prove to be incapable of sponsoring peace, could the answer possibly lie in a United Nations or world government so strong in comparison to individual nations that it could stop any aggression with ease?

"Hard-Boiled" Officers

In The Washington Post of September 13 there appeared an article by Alfred Friendly on the DPs in the U. S. zone of Germany, from which the following is quoted:

"All of the officials who deal with them (the DPs), ranging from soft-hearted representatives of the International Refugee Organization to hardboiled West Point Army officers (who incidentally don't stay hardboiled once they are face to face with the misery and suffering of their wards), agree there is no hope for DPs in Germany or eastern Europe."

Hardboiled is the adjective for the Army officer and, since the inference is uncomplimentary, he is written down by Mr. Friendly as a West Point officer. Now that the fighting and dying are over, it is the habit of reporters to attribute only undesirable qualities to Regular Army officers and especially to West Pointers, to present them to the public only in an unfavorable aspect.

Some of the officers Mr. Friendly contacted are undoubtedly regular; some may even have graduated from West Point, but the state of their hearts, regardless of the duties they are required to perform, has nothing to do with the schools they graduated from nor is it apt to be known to any but God.

'Judge Raedy's Trial'

Thank you for your fine editorial in The Washington Post of September 12 headed "Judge Raedy's Trial."

In it you said "We do not see how she can stay on the bench," which expresses the sentiments exactly of many taxpayers here in the District.

As a resident an da taxpayer I suggest that she resign—and soon. For her to administer justice would be a farce after her attitude to the courts in her own case.

Bevin's Gold Proposal

The explanation of the proposal for "redistributing the gold now buried in Fort Knox," which was given in The Washington Post September 9 by your reporter, Mr. Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., calls for some criticism.

In 1930-31, the Royal Institute of International Affairs held a series of symposiums on the "The Gold Question." Among the aspects of the problem considered was one: "For What Objects Do Central Banks Hold Gold?" The writer of this paper was the Hon. R. H. (now Lord) Brand, a British banker-economist well known in this city during the war. The first critic of the paper gave three objects: (1) for till-money or cash required by their customers, (2) to meet occasional debts due to other banks, and (3) for advertisement purposes. Gold coin is unlikely ever to circulate in advanced countries, and so the first purpose disappears. Debts to other banks in the same country are settled by drafts on the Central Bank and only debts to banks in other countries enter into the second count. There remains the advertisement power of gold held in a reserve.

Undoubtedly gold buried in the vaults of a bank produces a psychological effect, like the marble pillars, massive doors of oak and bronze and solid mahogany furniture of a bank. But gold that is not used produces but little real effect. It follows that to get the effect the gold must be used, i. e., in the settlement of international indebtedness. But if the balance of payments of a country is persistent (the Bretton Woods "fundamental disequilibrium") the gold would soon disappear. The truth is that mere possession of gold does not "strengthen" a currency. Only its use can do that and if a currency is overvalued—the position of many countries in western Europe today, Britain and France among them—the balance of payments will remain unfavorable and the gold will soon disappear abroad.

There remains the argument that a gold loan to the French government would conjure private hoardings from the family stocking. This could not apply to Britain, where private hoardings are small or nonexistent, and it is doubtful whether the measure would bring more than a few Napoleons into the light of day in France. The French peasant has been a hoarder of gold since at least the sixties and probably earlier, and so long as the estimated black market exchange price of the franc is 800 to one pound sterling against the official 480, a very great psychological effect would be needed to induce him to disgorge, so great as to be unthinkable.

To believe that monetary measures will remedy the present critical situation is illusion. The real cause was probed by the cartoonist in your September 6 issue. There are not enough goods in the world today, and too much money, and there is "only one cure—it's drastic—work." By advocating the "gold cure," Mr. Bevin drew a red herring across the trail that would lead to success.

I may add that the redistribution of the Fort Knox gold was suggested to me by an American diplomat in Cairo in 1941, and the advice that the best contribution that any nation could make to the economy of peace was to set its own house and garden in order, not throwing the weeds into that of its neighbor, was given by the regretted Minister of Finance, the late Sir Amin Osman Pasha, at the opening of the Middle East Economic Conference in April, 1944.

Calling Washington

Geneva Conferences

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND.—All through the long, bright summer and into September, this beautiful city by the clear blue lake has been the scene of one conference after another. Men with bulging brief cases have come and gone, talking the language of the conference, a language almost as formalized as the ritual of an ancient religion.

They have met in the palace of the old League of Nations, which inevitably has a somewhat depressing atmosphere. It is kept with immaculate care by the Swiss. The corridors and the conference rooms are cleaned and polished to a point of glistening and almost sterile purity. The flowerbeds and the trees are clipped and tended so that not a leaf is out of place.

Yet nevertheless it is a monument to a failure, and the sense of this weighs upon the men and women who pass along the high, gleaming corridors. This time, the need for cooperation is so much more desperate and the obstacles are far more threatening.

THAT WAS abundantly clear in the conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization, one of the more vigorous and meaningful branches of the United Nations. When the delegates of every nation had reported on their food supply, it was evident that the food picture was darker than at any time since the war. To make the available supply go around would therefore be much more difficult than in those years in which starvation seemed to hover always on the doorstep.

The arithmetic is simple. The bare minimum of food grains essential for the coming 12 months was put at 38 million tons. A few months ago it was thought that at least 32 million tons were in sight. Here, when all the adding was done, the final figure was 29 million, which spells h-u-n-g-e-r in many countries for millions of people.

A complication is the fact that many nations no longer have the proper kind of money—hard currency is the harsh phrase—to buy food even where it is in surplus. That is a factor, of course, overshadowing every attempt at economic agreement in this age of crisis.

At the same time that they added up available food supplies, the FAO delegates also considered the world need for the kind of things that in the long pull will mean greater agricultural production—machinery, fertilizers. The war put such necessities out of reach for almost every country and so the deficit is now great.

THE TOTAL need that came out was a staggering one and, naturally, the delegates looked hopefully to America to make up most of it. They were told frankly that such a hope was quite unrealistic, and the estimate was in the end greatly reduced.

While the FAO conference was at times weighed down with despair and again swept into the never-never land of wishful thinking, this organization is moving fairly rapidly toward a practical goal. That goal is a world food council with powers to allocate supplies to needy countries.

Behind the long step forward that FAO is taking is a remarkable Scotsman, Sir John Boyd Orr, FAO's director general. He aimed originally at a food board with powers to sell and resell in the world's markets. When that was impossible he accepted a compromise that represented an advance toward the kind of world in which, as Sir John passionately believes, hunger will be abolished.

WHILE THE FAO meeting was going on, another marathon conference was continuing. For more than three months delegates worked at framing the charter of an international trade organization built around the American concept of free trade. Later they will meet in Cuba to try to put into practical effect the ideal embodied in the Charter.

Whether they will succeed is quite another matter. Both in Europe and America there are grave doubts whether the world is ready for the ITO. At times the trade delegates felt as though they were moving in a beautiful squirrel cage, round and round and round, and getting nowhere. Perhaps in this stage of beginning recovery—measurable only by microscope—Europe cannot afford free trade. And there is great uncertainty whether the ITO will be approved by the Senate in Washington.

But the delegates come and go. They talk with reason and logic. They talk with earnestness and idealism even when the headlines that mirror events outside this curious little paradise of Switzerland say something quite different.

Animal Problems

Something has to be done about the District's squirrel population. Members of the Georgetown Garden Club wish to know what can be done. There is not enough food for the squirrels, and they eat our peaches, pears, apples, and even the blossoms of the magnolias. The Department of Agriculture refers us to Interior's Fish and Wild Life Service, and they tell us to call the District Rodent Control.

It is against the law to shoot squirrels. One can trap them and turn them out in Rock Creek Park. One can call the Trees and Parking Commission and beg them to destroy the nests in the park. People who feed these creatures in the parks are feeding rats with bushy tails.

We also have another complaint: the condition of sidewalks fouled by dogs. We need a "curb your dog" ordinance.

Our third concern is the homeless cat. We propose that all cats shall be licensed as are dogs.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War VII

BY CONTRAST with Mr. X, it may be useful to call in another expert, a distinguished political geographer, Professor Robert Strausz-Hupe of the University of Pennsylvania, whose article on "The Western Frontiers of Russia" appeared in the July issue of "The Review of Politics," a quarterly published by the University of Notre Dame:

Lippmann

"The mosaic of treaties and agreements, which forms the legal basis of Russian territorial acquisitions, is composed of strangely assorted pieces. Its general, although somewhat crude, shape was first revealed by the Soviet-German Secret Protocol of August 23, 1939. This document allocated Estonia and Latvia to the Soviet Union and established the demarcation line of the German-Soviet occupation of Poland. The Additional Protocol of September 28 transferred Lithuania to the Soviet orbit and expressed German agreement to the cession by Rumania of Bessarabia to the U.S.S.R. The latter transaction was consummated in the Soviet-Rumanian Agreement of June 28, 1940. The Soviet-Polish Treaty of August 1945, confirms, except for minor deviations, the arrangments agreed upon in the two Soviet-German Protocols. The Rumanian Peace Treaty of 1947 expressly reaffirms the validity of the Soviet-Rumanian Agreement of 1940. The parties to these transactions represent the most diverse ideologies and allegiances, none of which the Soviet Union permitted to interfere with its pursuit of strategic objectives. Where its frontiers were concerned the Soviet Union managed to overlook the distinction between friend and foe, fascism and democracy, Slav and non-Slav.

"CONSIDERED AS a whole, this strange patchwork of title deeds, bound together by the military might of the Soviet Union, annuls the defeat of 1917. It restores Russia to the geographical positions held by the last Romanovs. The Baltic Republics and Bessarabia reverted—as, writing nearly 20 years ago, Isaiah Bowman predicted—to Russian domination; the territorial clauses of the peace treaty with Finland, outright cession of the Karelian Isthmus and Petsamo Province, and lease of a naval base at Porkkla-Udd, reinstate Russia actually, although not formally, in her pre-1917 positions on the Baltic and Arctic coasts; and Russian magnanimity towards Poland is rewarded by valuable gains in East Prussia, Bukovina and the Carpathians. The total area acquired by Russia between 1945 and 1947 is approximately as large as the total area lost between 1917 and 1921. Russia has redeemed the hostages she gave to defeat, revolution and national self-determination.

"THE WESTERN frontiers of the Soviet sphere of influence coincide so closely with those Czarist Russia planned to draw after the defeat of the Central Powers that Czarist and Soviet policies appear to differ as regards methods only. From inter-Allied agreements concluded during World War I and the published statements of leading public figures, notably Russian and Czech, emerges the Czarist Government's Grand Design for eastern Europe: the frontier of Russian Poland was to have been pushed westward towards Stettin, bringing within the Russian Empire the Polish provinces of Germany and Austria; the northeastern provinces of Hungary were to be ceded to Russia and a Greater Serbia and Greater Rumania were to receive additional territories carved from Hungary, leaving the latter country a small state wedged between Serbia (Yugoslavia), Rumania and a kingdom of the Czechs ruled by a Russian prince; and Russia was to receive the European possessions of Turkey inclusive of the Straits. The aggregate of annexed territories, protectorates, alliances and pan-Slav affiliations would have extended Russian influence to the Oder River, the Alps, the Adriatic and the Aegean. The Czarist project, cleansed of the dynastic and social preconceptions of Czardom, took shape in the system of annexed territories, occupation zones, friendly regimes and ideological affiliations which constitutes the Soviet sphere of influence in Europe. It is only at the Straits that the Soviet Government failed to attain the goals set by its predecessors."

THIS EXPLAINS, as Mr. X's analysis does not, the pattern and plan, not merely the generalized fact, of Soviet expansion, and also the causes and the issues of the diplomatic conflict in the postwar period—1945-1947.

The westward expansion of the Russian frontiers and of Russian sphere of influence, though always a Russian aim, was accomplished when, as, and because the Red army defeated the German army and advanced to the center of Europe. It was the mighty power of the Red army, not the ideology of Karl Marx, which enabled the Russian government to expand its frontiers. It is the pressure of that army far beyond the new frontiers which make the will of the Kremlin irresistible within the Russian sphere of influence. It is the threat that the Red army may advance still farther west—into Italy, into western Germany, into Scandinavia—that gives the Kremlin and native Communist Parties of western Eurpe an abnormal and intolerable influence in the affairs of the European continent.

Therefore, the immediate and decisive problem of our relations with the Soviet Union is whether, when, on what conditions, the Red army can be prevailed upon to evacuate Europe.

Forum Of Nations

By Barnet Nover

As The Second Assembly Meets

THE SECOND General Assembly of the United Nations is meeting in New York in an atmosphere that is a blend of prayerful anticipation and mounting despair.

NOVER

The high hopes that the peoples of the world originally placed in the new world organization have not wholly vanished. But they are evaporating.

Much of the history of the United Nations in the 20 months since the Security Council and the General Assembly first met in London has consisted of endless and embittered arguments, usually between Russia and the Western powers, which almost invariably ended as they began in total disagreement.

CONSTRUCTIVE accomplishments have thus far been few and far between. Failures have been numerous and in some cases, notably the failure to get unanimous agreement on international atomic energy control and the failure to end violations of the Greek border, little short of tragic.

The Security Council was designed to be the heart of the new world peace system. Because of the veto and its exercise by Russia its record has been one of continuous frustration and futility.

It has shown no capacity to "take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace" which is the prime purpose of United Nations as enunciated in the Charter.

Its numerous meetings have not led to the development of "friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self determination of peoples."

It has not served as a "center for harmonizing the actions of nations," another purpose voiced in the Charter.

The Assembly, having more limited functions, and being unhampered by the veto which has paralyzed the Council, has, on the whole, done very much better. In a very real sense it is now the hope of all those who continue to look to the United Nations as the keystone of the arch of peace.

TO BLAME the U. N. for the dismal record is like blaming a golf club for a bad drive. The U. N. had no existence beyond and apart from the members that compose it. It is no self-operating agency but merely an instrument which can be used or abused, for good ends or bad.

The story of the United Nations during these past two years reflects the tragic state of international relations since the end of the most destructive of all wars. The U. N., like the world, is split into two camps with each camp glowering at the other across a gulf that steadily becomes wider.

THE VETO is not the cause but the symptom of the disorder that afflicts the United Nations as it afflicts the world.

President Truman, Secretary Marshall, Senator Vandenberg and other responsible American statesmen have again and again declared that the U. N. is the cornerstone of United States foreign policy.

Few Americans will quarrel with that statement, since it represents the desire of the overwhelming majority in this country. Certainly nothing would please Americans more than to see the U. N. grow in prestige, power and authority. Such a development would mean an easing of world tensions and thus help reduce the great burdens which this country is now being called upon to bear.

THE RUSSIAN LEADERS clearly do not feel about the U. N. the way we do.

From the Russian point of view, the U. N. is primarily and preponderantly a propagandist platform from which to broadcast the warmed-over outpourings of Pravda and Izvestia.

They do not regard it as an agency of peace or favor its becoming one. They have no intention of permitting it to have a life of its own. They do not believe in collective security. They insist that the U. N., which in this case means the Council, must only act when it has the unanimous consent of the Big Five. In that way and only in that way can they control every action taken by the Security Council or prevent the Council from acting at all, which is what they have done on 18 separate occasions.

The grim fact is that abused as the veto has been during these past 18 months there is no possible way in which the veto provision can be eliminated from the Charter if Russia says no. Thus the Council may continue to be condemned to helplessness.

The question now facing the great majority of member nations who want to see the organization prosper, is whether the veto, while retained, can be circumvented. In his Sunday address Secretary Marshall hinted that this was possible. He said that there were many clauses in the Charter which had not yet been invoked, many devices yet untried.

In the meantime, the Assembly can continue to carry out its great function of serving as the voice and conscience of mankind. If it does so with courage and firmness ways may be found, regardless of the veto, to make the U. N. the living force it ought to be.

Certainly there is nothing to prevent like-minded nations to band together to carry out on their own, if the Council is inhibited from doing so, the recommendations approved by two thirds of the Assembly.

German Policy

By Sumner Welles

Cart Before The Horse

THIS IS a year preceding a presidential election. Washington is paying increasing attention to pressure groups that are politically potent. Among them are the German-American organizations who insist that the Germans have been more sinned against than sinning; those to whom the only important question is how our occupation costs can be reduced; those who believe that Germany can be employed as a buffer state against Russia; and, finally, those financial and industrial interests that expect fat profits from a highly industrialized Germany.

Our Government now announces that it will scrap the industrial level for western Germany fixed at Potsdam and reestablish the level of 1936.

We should not forget that it was that level which produced "guns rather than butter," and enabled Germany only three years later to launch the greatest military offensive the world has ever known.

It is argued that, since we now have to pay the bill, we have the right to manage western Germany as we see fit, and that since our "new plan" would make her self-sustaining we could thereby reduce our own expenses.

Our decision might perhaps be defended if the major powers had agreed upon a joint policy toward Germany, if the German people had shown convincing proof of their regeneration, and if international military and industrial controls had been set up as guaranties that Germany could not rearm.

Not the slightest progress has yet been made in reaching any one of these objectives.

WHEN THE Foreign Ministers of the Big Four meet again in November, there will be even less reason than there was last March to hope for an agreement upon a German peace treaty.

The German people are far more dangerous today than on VE-Day. There is no consciousness of war guilt. Self-pity is rampant. The individual German complains that democracy has brought him nothing except hunger and cold. He feels that Germany's only crime was being on the losing side. He sees the victors quarreling among themselves, and that the occupation is distinguished neither by principles of justice and morality, nor even by a modicum of efficiency. A new form of nazism is rising, and it differs from communism only in name.

Because of the East-West split there is no prospect of any four-power military alliance against Germany.

By giving western Germany the chance to rebuild her war machine before we establish the safeguards required to insure security, we are putting the cart before the horse.

Reports persist that the Soviet Union is creating a German army from among the more than a million prisoners of war still in Russian hands. The nucleus of this force is the "Free Germany" organization established in Russia before the end of the war and headed by Field Marshal von Paulus and General von Seidlitz. If this new army is to be employed in the reconstruction of the strong and united Germany upon which Russia insists, the American program will be welcome news in Moscow.

The Marshall Plan will not be worth the paper it is written on unless the democracies of western Europe are assured of their safety from any new German aggression, and unless the Ruhr's coal and steel become an intrinsic part of the economy of all of western Europe rather than of that of Germany alone.

Our "new plan" for Germany is having an increasingly disruptive effect. The French people are becoming convinced that we mean to give the recovery of Germany priority over that of France. General de Gaulle has gained many recruits during the past three weeks. The Communists expect to increase their strength in this autumn's municipal elections. The democratic parties, caught between the Right and the Left, will steadily lose support unless the French people know they are going to get justice and security, and that means the retention of the resources of the Saar, an equal voice in determining and in controlling the industrial output of western Germany, and an American guaranty of safety against German aggression.

Because of the Soviet's policy this Government is justified in seeking such administrative changes in the western zone as may increase the opportunities for gainful employment, improve living standards, and lessen the gap between imports and exports. But incredibly stupid as our occupation policy has been until now, its dangers are less than those to be foreseen from any such unilateral "new plan" as that recently announced.

OUR FUNDAMENTAL error is the assumption that, because we must pay the major part of the occupation costs, we are thereby alone entitled to determine the political and economic future of western Germany, and that the immediate cost to us should be rightfully regarded as a determining factor in the formulation of such a decision. What is at stake is not the cost of the German occupation this year or next. What is at stake is the peace of Europe and of the world.

Until and unless a German peace treaty can be concluded, the only policy which could afford assurance for the future would be one under which the western European democracies and ourselves would jointly fix German industrial levels, and under which the distribution and control of the Ruhr's coal and steel would be entrusted to an international organization in which France, Great Britain and the United States would participate on a basis of equality.

Adm. Land Wants U.S. to Have 5000 Planes for Transport

Creation of a peacetime fleet of 5000 transport planes was urged yesterday by Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, retired, president of the Air Transport Association.

Testifying before the President's Air Policy Commission at its first public session, Land proposed that the major portion of the aircraft be kept in reserve by the Government for possible wartime use. The airlines would use as many of the craft for peacetime passenger and freight transport as could be supported commercially, he suggested.

About 1000 transport planes now are in service. A substantial increase in this number is hoped for during the next few years.

Up to Airlines

Land declared that the airlines should be called upon to assume a great portion of the work of military air transport in wartime. In peacetime, he said, the military services should maintain only a nucleus air transport service operating to bases not served by civilian lines.

The airline trade association head charged that the Civil Aeronautics Board and Civil Aeronautics Administration had "erred fundamentally" in handling air safety.

The regulatory agencies, Land said, have imposed regulations governing "almost every detail of air transport operations." This, he added, places a premium on "following the printed page, rather than exercising wise judgment."

Keep Air Safe

As an alternative, the ATA president urged that airline operations should be given greater responsibility in keeping the airways safe.

While the hearing was under way, the Congressional Air Policy Board met on Capitol Hill. Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), was elected chairman and Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.), vice chairman of the group, at the organizational meeting.

Study to Begin Soon

Brewster said the board will begin its study of current and future aviation needs soon. Congress gave the group virtually the same mission as President Truman handed to his board—the drafting of a new aviation policy for the United States.

Chairman Thomas K. Finletter and three of the four other members of the presidential board were present as the group opened its hearings. Present were: Professor George P. Baker of Harvard, Palmer Hoyt, Denver Post publisher, and Arthur D. Whiteside, Dun & Bradstreet head. Henry Ford 2d was the only absentee.

In an opening statement, Finletter stressed the national security aspects of the long study the commission is undertaking.

Milton W. Arnold, ATA vice president in charge of operations and engineering, told the commission that lack of funds has been a bottleneck in solving safety and air traffic problems and in maintaining schedules. More money for approach lights, ILS and GCA landing systems and surveillance radar would help, he stated.

"But," he added, "if we had all the money in the world we could solve the problem in less than three to five years."

Former Representative Robert Ramspeck, the association's executive director, declared the CAB had been "derelict in its duties" in failing to bring nonscheduled, contract air operators under adequate regulation. Some recent CAB rulings discriminated against the airlines in favor of the contract operators, he said.

Admiral Land urged that the Government, the airlines and the plane manufacturers should get together and share the development costs of badly needed new transport planes.

Tells of Needs

Greatest need at the moment, he said, is for a plane carrying a 10 to 15 ton pay load. A secondary need is for a new "feeder line" plane carrying four to six tons. Future development of an air cargo industry particularly depends upon new planes designed for such work, Land said, as present freight aircraft are converted passenger craft and inefficient.

Other recommendations submitted by Land for the association were:

1. An air parcel post system at reasonable rates should be made available to the public immediately. Air mail postage rates should be gradually reduced as airlines reduce costs and improve operations to promote more and more mail shipments by air.

2. The division of responsibility between the CAB and CAA on matters of air safety should be eliminated, with authority resting in the former.

3. Current restriction on surface transport agencies getting into aviation should be continued.

4. The States should be forbidden to impose safety or economic regulations upon air transportation.

5. The Federal Government should stop taxing motor fuels, except aviation gasoline, and the State should be prohibited from taxing aviation gasoline.

6. Excise taxes on radios place American airlines at a disadvantage with foreign competitors serving this country. The latter's American-bought radios are considered exports and exempt from excise tax.

WAA Has 15,000 Girdles Left From Wac Bulge Battle

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—The War Assets Administration, surplus property disposal agency, has the darnedest things to dispose of.

You wouldn't think that a war could leave the country with 15,000 tearose girdles in its warehouses. But the WAA announced today that the girdles will be offered to women with some surplus property of their own—around the hipline—October 10 and October 20.

In addition, 38,000 broadcloth garter belts will be offered to gals who scorn girdles. The garments, originally bought to battle the bulge among the Wacs, cost the Government $310,000. Veterans—male and female—get first chance to buy October 10 and commercial buyers may purchase the underthings October 20.

Army Will Use 'Dud' in Test Of Its New King-Size Bomb

By Elton C. Fay

The Army will limit the first test of its new wing-size bomb to the drop of a "dud" missile, with actual blast experiments to be made later from fixed ground positions.

This was learned yesterday from Army Air Force and Army Ordnance experts who said the initial problem to be solved is how to release the huge 42,000-pound bomb from an airplane and determine the pattern of its fall to a target.

They note that never before has a load of this weight been dropped from an aircraft—and they won't even guess what may happen when the specially fitted B-29 suddenly becomes 21 tons lighter.

Ordnance officers said they assume that one of the factors of particular interest in the first experiments is the depth of penetration attained by the heavy bomb.

They suggested that to carry through the tests, a loaded bomb might be planted later at the depth indicated by the drop-test and then exploded. This would provide an opportunity for a more careful check on the force of the explosion and the accompanying earth shocks.

The combat use of the huge bomb presumably will be decided by the results of the series of tests, the first of which are scheduled this fall.

Military men note that the bomb under certain conditions would have an advantage over an atomic blast. If, for instance, the military situation called for heavy blasting of large areas through which advancing troops or naval forces would eventually move, the 42,000-pound missile could be used without having to cope with the deadly contamination left by an exploding A-bomb, a hazard to the advancing force as well as the enemy.

However, the blast produced by the standard TNT bomb, despite its size, would be only a fraction as destructive as that produced by an atomic weapon.

Pauley's Job Just Below Little Cabinet

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Edwin W. Pauley is occupying the office, doing the work and drawing within a sou of the pay of a "Little Cabinet" member over in the Pentagon, but he says he doesn't want a permanent top Government post.

The former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee and good friend of President Truman told The Washington Post yesterday that he was going to serve "probably three, maybe four months" only as special assistant to Secretary of War Royall.

Pauley branded reports that he was being groomed to succeed Royall as "purely news speculation." He denied in an interview that President Truman had "sponsored" his in his present post.

Evades Direct Question

But to a direct question as to whether he would accept a Cabinet or Litle Cabinet post of offered him, the California oilman would give neither a flat yes nor a flat no answer.

"In the first place," he declared, "I haven't been tendered the job. Its not up for my consideration. In the second place, if I get such an offer, whether or not I accept will depend upon the circumstances at the time. If I had to answer naw, I would say no."

Last year, Pauley's nomination to be Undersecretary of the Navy proveked a long and bitter congressional battle over confirmation. President Truman finally withdrew the nomination at Pauley's request. Oppponents, including the then Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, charged that he had suggested dropping a Federal oil suit in return for Democratic campaign contributions.

Named To Allied Comimssion

Later, President Truman named Pauley United States representative on the Allied Reparations Commission—a position not requiring Senate confirmation. Last week, he was appointed special assistant to the Secretary of War—which also doesn't require confirmation.

Gossip in Army circles has been that he is slated to succeed Secretary Royall, when the big North Carolinian quits to run for governor of his State—as has been reported. Ickes—who resigned from the Cabinet during the row over Pauley last year—said as much recently in his column.

The big California oil millionaire received this reported yesterday in his suite in the Pentagon overlooking the Potomac. It was formerly Assistant Secretary of War Howard Petersen's office. Petersen resigned recently, and the post has not been filled.

Secretary Royall took over the War Secretary's suite when he was upped from Undersecretary. The new Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, will occupy Royall's old office. Newly appointed Undersecretary of War Draper takes rooms formerly used by lesser officials.

Pauley Explains Duties

Pauley explained his duties included handling industrial mobilization matters and "certain procurement matters", particularly those involved in Army-Navy unification.

As Undersecretary, Royall handled industrial mobilization, procurement and military justice matters. By "delegation", Pauley is taking over the first two of these functions, it was said. Yesterday, he attended a meeting of the Army and Navy Munitions Board as the Was Department representative.

Pauley said he doubted if he would handle any questions involving oil. Fuel procurement is handled by a joint service board.

He declared that he had accepted the post at Royall's request "to assist to the best of my ability." Answering questions frankly, he said he considered his fitness for a high post involving Army procurement and industrial procurement to be as an organizer.

Appointment Not Discussed

Denying that the President had "sponsored" his appointment, Pauley said that he had not seen Mr. Truman, talked to him or corresponded with him "on this or any other question" since Royall asked him to serve about three weeks ago.

"I have not discussed the matter of an appointment—or even my coming here for this job—with either the President or Secretary Forrestal," he stated.

Pauley declined to elaborate on his statement that his acceptance of another post would "depend on the circumstances." "You have no desire to go through another Senate fight?" he was asked.

"I don't mind a fight," was the reply. "Let's leave it that I have no desire for any appointment beyond this one."

As a special assistant, Pauley draws $9995 a year—$5 less than the job as undersecretary or assistant secretary pays.

More Workers on Job In Australia

Melbourne, (AP).—Australia's working population in June was 3,279,000, compared with 3,048,600 in July, 1939,, a government statistician has reported.

The figures were given by Research Officer J. F. Nimmo of the Bureau of Census and Staistics to the Arbitration Court during a multiple claim by unions for a 40-hour week, which has not yet been concluded.

Nimmo said the figures included temporary unemployed and sick—30,000 in June, and 298,000 in July, 1939.

Takoma Park Asks for New Traffic Light

Takoma Park City Council last night voted to apply to Maryland State Road Commission for a permit to install a traffic light at the intersection of Carroll and Ethan Allen aves. in Takoma Park.

The action was taken following a letter from E. G. Duncan, district engineer for the road commission, who informed the council that the commission could not itself install a light inside the incorporated limits of a town.

Duncan said, however, a traffic survey had indicated a light was needed at the intersection.

To Cost $900

The light, according to Duncan, will cost $900.

His letter also informed the council that the State Road Commission will soon install a light at New Hampshire and Ethan Allen aves. itself.

Both lights have been sought by Takoma Park residents for some time.

During the meeting, Mrs. Philip Wood of the League of Women Voters, urged the council to "improve" conditions in the cells in the Takoma Park police station and suggested that, if the cells are unused, to clean them out and make them available for office use.

Ask More Policemen

The league also asked additional policemen to bring Takoma Park protection up to the standards of the International Association of Police Chiefs, which call for one policeman per 1000 population.

The council will act on the league's suggestions at an executive meeting Monday night.

Moral: Try to Keep Your Enemies Alive

New York, (AP).—Deaths of friends or enemies has more effect on most people than they realize, says Dr. J. L. Moreno, psychiatrist, writing in Sociometry.

Each individual, he says, is part of an intimate structure, which comprises his friends, associates and even enemies. Whenever one of the persons in this structure drops out, he is likely to be replaced by another. But a time comes when there is less and less replacing as the others in the group die.

Dr. Moreno says the effect on an individual paves the way for premature ageing, sickness and the hastening of death.

19 Candidates Air Platforms At Greenbelt

Nineteen candidates for election to the five-member Greenbelt, Md., Town Council aired their platforms at the Greenbelt school last night.

Speaking at a public rally sponsored by the Greenbelt Citizens' Association, all of the candidates expressed favor of purchase of the town by its present occupants.

The community is soon to be sold by the Government. Some candidates had been accused of advocating sale to private interests or to real estate speculators.

All of the candidates who mentioned the isue also favored opening the town to private businesses which would run in competition with the present cooperative stores operated by Greenbelt Consumer Services.

None Backs Present Set-up

None of the speakers advocated maintaining the present set-up although cmapaign literature circulated in the past several weeks had inferred that one slate of candidates wanted to protect the cooperative from outside competition.

The candidates are divided into three groups—two slates of five each, indorsed by local organizations, and nine others who are running as independents. All were present for last night's meeting.

Supported by a Committee for Better Government is a slate composed of Allen D. Morrison, present member of the council, Thomas J. Canning, David W. Granahan, Frank J. Lastner and Mrs. Elizabeth Harrington.

Only Woman in Race

Mrs. Harrington, who is the only woman in the race, said she favored sale of the Greenbelt homes to the present occupants but also expressed favor of public referendums on all matters of vital interest to the community.

She said she would advocate a public vote to determine if the cooperative should compete with private business.

The other slate, supported by the Greenbelt Improvement Association, consists of George F. Bauer, present mayor, George M. Fishbaugh, Benjamin P. Goldfadder, Frank J. McConnell and Albert J. Schaffer.

The independent candidates are: Paul Dunbar and Joseph L. Rogers, incumbents; Vernon T. Fox, J. C. Smith, A. C. Long, Abraham Chasanow, Herbert Hertz, Sherrod Duke.

Study Group Offers 7-Point Tax Program

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—A seven-point tax program aimed at raising more revenue for cities and towns in the State was recommended to the League of Virginia Municipalities today by a special committee to study new potential sources of revenue headed by Mayor William Hodges Mann of Petersburg.

In his report, Mayor Mann said the committee did not feel it should recommend a general sales tax but expressed his personal feeling "It is coming sooner or later" unless localities are given more State funds for public schools.

Mayor Mann's tax study committee recommended:

"Two-thirds of the profits of the beer excise tax should be distributed to the counties, cities and towns on the same basis as ABC profits are now distributed.

"The capital tax policy of the State should be altered to allow the localities to tax all tangible personal property now classified as 'capital' except inventories which are to remain as capital.

"The State appropriation for the support of public free schools should be increased to an amount approximating total instructional costs in both the counties and the municipalities.

"Prohibitions and restrictions relating to local taxing powers as set forth in the State tax code should be removed.

"Each locality should receive not less than one-half of the proceeds of any State sales tax collected therefrom.

"Broad powers should be granted the cities and towns to impose local excise taxes.

"Restrictions, State or local, on local tax rates should be removed."

Mayor Horace H. Edwards of Richmond, in a talk to a panel of city mayors and city councilmen this afternoon, called for closer cooperation between the counties and the municipalities in solving related problems.

Best Year Proves Olney's 'System'

By Richard L. Coe

OLNEY'S SEASON was the best yet. Which means, Co-manager Redge Allen tells us, better things for next summer.

He and partner Evelyn Freyman believe in plowing back their profits into their business. They're hoping to rebuild the auditorium floor so as to grade the seats on an incline. They hope to put in a middle aisle. They'd like to rebuild the stage so's to include "flys," which means multi-set shows. And they'd give their hearts for about a hundred more seats.

Those extra seats mean the difference between "getting by" and making a profit. For when you only have room for 500 paying customers, it's heart-breaking to turn away folks before the week's even started.

Which is what happened during the week Edward Everett Horton finished up Sunday night. The SRO sign was out all week. ZaSu Pitts' "The Late Christopher Bean," while it didn't gross as heavily as Horton's week (higher prices), actually holds the theater's attendance record. Other SRO nights included Haila Stoddard's "Dream Girl," Ruth Chatterton's "The Little Foxes," Ilka Chase's "Laughter From a Cloud" and Sheila Barrett's "Dulcy."

So, once again the "star system" has proved itself. At the beginning of the summer, you may remember, the Olney's plan was to base its season on a resident company, filling in with guest stars every few weeks. Most idealists connected with the theater are violent opponents of the "star system." It's the thing that's most wrong with the theater, they'll tell you, this business of basing an attraction on a name player.

Now Olney's Got a Name

Ideally, they're right, to be sure, but, the fact remains, it's the Olney's parade of stars which has given the Nation's Capital the best summer theater it's had since Thespis took to the woods. Most of those stars walked off with a percentage of the gross, some getting as high as 2,000 bucks for six performances, but the Olney's not kicking. The theater's reward has been a steadily growing patronage and a name for itself on the summer circuit.

The beginning of the summer saw over 100 summer playhouses under way from Maine to Maryland. In the first month 20 of them dropped by the wayside. And of them all, Olney had a season of 15 weeks, longest playing time of any. Which means that the actors now know about Olney and won't be hesitant about coming down to the heat belt.

So, then, congratulations to the Olney and its people. Twenty miles is a long way to drive out for an evening's playgoing (most of the famed New England barn theaters are in small towns), but this season has proved the Capital can support a professional summer theater. Wonder what the banks which wouldn't take a GI loan application for this venture, think of their wisdom now.

Till next June, Olney, good luck in the planning, and we hope some of your dreams come true.

SCHOOLDAYS: Each year, with the opening of school, the K-B theaters hold a "back-to-school party" for their neighborhood youngsters, presenting each with a composition book, a pencil and other shortcuts to learning. Saturday's this year's party date. A half-hour cartoon show will precede the matinee showings of "Cheyenne" and "They Won't Believe Me," at the Atlas; "The Egg and I" at the Senator, and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" at the Naylor.

CONVENTION TIME: Friday and Saturday bring the joint convention of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America and the American Theater Owners to the Shoreham. One result of the meeting will be the merger of the two organizations, which represent about 11,000 theaters, three fourths of the country's houses. Attorney General Clark will address the 500 showmen Saturday. A. Julian Brylawski, convention chairman, reports the speakers' list also includes Gradwell Sears, president of United Artists; Spyros Skouras, president of 20th Century, and Barney Balaban, Paramount's prexy.

BISTRO NIGHTS: Another sure sign of the seasonal switch is the resumption of big-time variety in the tonier hostels. Last night brought the posh opening of the Statler's Embassy Room, with Morton Downey singing to Ted Straeter's skilled piano and orchestra, while Thursday night is the Mayflower's traditional "Champagne and Orchids" opening for beautiful Jeanne Shirley, singing with Florian Zubach's orchestra.

FANS: Fan club, though, go on through the seasons. Miss Betty Jane Johnson, 1809 Good Hope rd. se., for instance, has hardly missed one of John Calvert's magical acts at the Capitol, and has formed a John Calvert Fan Club, boasting no membership dues, for the new "Falcon" of the flicks . . . And no mention of fans this week is complete without Mrs. Gertrude C. Kennedy of 6713 Gude ave., Takoma Park, Md., who has seen "The Great Waltz" 15 times and is still going strong.

Stars Switch Hair Hues

Hollywood.—Lana Turner and Donna Reed abandon their usual hair hues as blonde and brunette, respectively, in their starring roles with Van Heflin and Richard Hart in M-G-M's "Green Dolphin Street"—but it wasn't just a stunt, Director Victor Saville explained. Lana's role calls for a "brunette personality," and Donna's for a "blonde personality," he said, hence the switch for each.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Evatt, Aranha Share Spotlight at U. N.

By Drew Pearson

As the General Assembly of the United Nations meets in New York today, two men hold the spotlight as its possible presidents. They are:

Dr. Aranha

Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, former gaucho, former foreign minister and best champion of the United States in South America.

Herbert Evatt of Australia, great champion of small nations, twister of the Soviet tail, and an original architect of the United Nations.

Though General Marshall and the Russians will retain the power, Aranha and Evatt will represent the hopes and dreams of millions that someone may lead the world away from the widening chasm that yawns between the Communist and capitalist worlds of the U. S. S. R. and the United States.

Aranha, who served as president of the United Nations Assembly at its special Palestine session, is so strongly pro-American that it has hurt him in Brazil. As Ambassador to the United States he came to know and love this country. He visited the Kentucky Derby with Jim Farley (and incidentally won $1500); took in both Republican and Democratic conventions; inspected Boulder Dam; played roulette at Elko, Nev., put his children in American schools, toured the United States from one end to the other.

An impatient, indefatigable former cattleman from the ranches of south Brazil, he spent one year in the saddle, sleeping outdoors, leading a revolution; has one bullet in his shoulder, one heel shot away. No ordinary diplomat, Aranha chafes at delay, has been the only man able to put Soviet Ambassador Gromyko in his place. In New York last winter Gromyko would keep the U. N. Council waiting a full hour, arrived whenever he felt like it. Courteous United States Delegate Warren Austin patiently waited. But not Aranha. When it came his turn to preside over the Council, Aranha delayed not one minute for the tardy Russian. And when Gromyko attempted some of his fancy sabotage, the Brazilian nearly bit his head off.

Herbert Evatt, other outstanding diplomat in New York, is equally pro-American, equally anti-Russian, very much the champion of the smaller nations. At San Francisco it was Evatt who foresaw the danger of what now has nearly wrecked the United Nations—the veto. He fought it to the bitter end, was just as much the critic of the United States on this point as he was of Russia.

When the battle was all over and Peruvian Foreign Minister Manuel Gallagher proposed a standing vote of tribute to Evatt, the Australian cynically replied:

"There are many things I might say at this moment, but I am afraid someone might exercise his power of veto over me."

One year later at the Paris Peace Conference, Evatt was fighting side-by-side with Jimmie Byrnes against the Soviet's sabotaging tactics. In fact, Evatt sometimes seemed to be goading Byrnes into action.

Evatt married an American, loves American baseball, collects American books. At the age of 36 he was a member of the Australian Supreme Court, since 1940 a labor member of the Australian Parliament, since 1941 Foreign Minister of his country.

In London, the British don't particularly like Evatt, consider him too pro-American. On one thing, however, he emphatically disagrees with the USA—the future of Japan.

En route to New York, Evatt stopped in Tokyo, visited General MacArthur. It was predicted the sparks would fly. For Australia, fearful of another Japanese invasion of the South Pacific, is harsh in criticizing MacArthur's so-called Japanese appeasement.

Australians believe Japan cannot be trusted, cannot be allowed to rebuild her industry, must be kept a third-rate power. Many Americans on the other hand, led by MacArthur, consider Japan an Asiatic base against Russia.

Arriving in Tokyo, Evatt and MacArthur were photographed together, walked arm-in-arm together. Rumor had it that Evatt had fallen under MacArthur's magic spell. Underneath, however, Evatt still remains a staunch Australian, still turns an emphatic thumbs-down on a soft peace for Japan.

FBI Seeking Facts on Move To Parole Capone's Men

The Federal Bureau of Investigation said yesterday it is "conducting an inquiry" into the paroling of four former members of the late Al Capone's gang.

A spokesman for the FBI said the investigation is being made at the request of Attorney General Clark, and added its report will be turned over to him.

Asked about the nature and scope of the inquiry the spokesman declined further comment.

Earlier, Daniel M. Lyons, whose appointment as chairman of the U. S. Parole Board was announced Saturday by the prole board told a reported he "may make some kind of preliminary statement soon" on the paroles.

The Chicago convicts, released August 14, are Paul Ricca, Louis Campagna, Philip d'Andrea and Charles Gioe. They had served three years and four months of their ten year sentences for extrotion. They were charged with extorting a million dollars from the movie industry.

Two Illinois congressmen, Representatives Busbey and Church, Republicans, have said they would demand a congressional investigation of the paroles unless full information on them were made public.

In addition to the FBI spokesman's comment that the agency was "conducting an inquiry into the matter," the FBI issued a brief statement saying: "The FBI has received instructions from the Attorney General to contact Congressman Fred E. Busbey of Illinois and obtain from him any information he has, after which the infromation will be passed on to the Attorney General. Any further comment will have to come from him.

Later Lyons issued a statement saying that a copy of Busbey's telegram to Clark protesting the paroles had been furnished him.

"AtAA the earleist possible time after assuming the office of chairman of the parole board, I shall give attention to the Congressman's jurisdiction of that board, he said.

"My only further comment at this stage is that there is, under our system of laws, a presumption of regularity attaching to the acts of all public officers."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WHIDBY ISLAND, Wash., Sept. 15.—Tom Hamilton would like to disillusion the people, particularly the Navy people, who are assuming the Naval Academy will have a world-beating football team this season. It's by way of avoiding any embarrassment later in the year when Navy doesn't win all its football games.

POVICH

"Our unfortunate position is that folks remember us as the team that scored three touchdowns against Army and almost licked 'em," says Hamilton. "That's the last thing they saw of us, and I gues we did leave a good impression. But they shouldn't forget that we are the club that lost eight games and only won one contest."

Hamilton would like Navy's fans to understand that the Midshipmen were fired up for that Army contest, like no other. "That's the day we played our one good ball game. We didn't play a good game every week, because we didn't have a good football team, but against Army, the boys responded and truly surpassed themselves. The Navy team you saw that day was a fine one, that had magnificent spirit and was playing over its head.

RIGHT NOW Hamilton is taking a sort of dim view of Navy's 1947 campaign which calls for a rough succession of games with California, Columbia, Duke, Cornell, Penn, Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Penn State and Army. "I think I have one and a half football teams to go with," he says, "and that isn't enuogh. We're not deep enough in reserves, yet, but if we do develop reserve strength we'll be very good."

You can't win football games in these times with fewer than two good teams at your command, says Hamilton, and he points out what happened against Notre Dame last season. "We played Notre Dame for the first 11 minutes at Baltimore, and even had a little edge on 'em. Then Leahy pulled out his first team to rest 'em, and put in his second unit. So I pulled my regulars out and substituted a new club. From that point, they ran away with the ball game, 28-0. We couldn't match the Notre Dame reserves."

The only Navy coach who is smiling these days is Eddie Erdlatz, the end coach. He has come up with a crew of ends that is comfort to Head Coach Hamilton, and in Art Markel he thinks he has the East's best. Markel teamed with the graduated Leon Bramlett last season and was rated the better end. This season, Navy is five deep in wingmen with Phil Ryan and Harrison Frazier, a pair up from the Plebes, battling for the other regular job against Roy Russell and Bob Smith.

LINE COACH RIP MILLER is somewhat dubious about his talent, however. Jim Carrington, his best guard of last season, is still a midshipman but he has used up his eligibility because of a year at Cornell before he entered Navy. Miller has tabbed Ken Shiweck, Scott Emerson and Ed Golding for guard jobs but after them the talent drops sharply and Miller is unhappy unless he has five good guards.

The tackle situation is good only as far as it goes. Both of the top tackles of last season, Newbold Smith and Dick Shimshak, are on deck. Smith was a spectacular tackle last year but, privately, Navy coaches thought Shimshak was better. Where the other tackles are coming from, Miller wishes he knew. He feels better, though, from having converted big Chuck Strahey from end to tackle.

The center job poses no worries whatsoever. In contrast, it is wonderful. Navy thinks Dick Scott is the best center in the world, and at any rate he's a powerful good one. Lately, however, Tex Lawrence has come along to disport himself like something that is not an unreasonable facsimile of Scott.

NAVY WILL OPEN the season against California on September 27 with a backfield comprised of Quarterback Reaves Baysinger, jr., Left Halfback Pete Williams, Right Halfback Al McCully, and Fullback Bill Hawkins. There's nothing wrong with that unit, the coaches confess, and they think it's pretty wonderful in fact, but after them, what?

There's nobody in sight who stacks up as an adequate replacement for Baysinger, who calls the signals, runs and throws the best passes. The coaches are trembling against the day when Baysinger is hurt and they have to call in a new guy to run their T-formation.

McCully is the fellow who has given Navy's coaches their biggest lift in the backfield. In the intrasquad scrimmage here the other day, he tore 'em up and with Hawkins and Williams he gives Navy a potent running attack.

But they're not 60-minute performers, Hamilton says. And when he counts 'em, they only add up to four. Every football team should have 10 good backs, Hamilton thinks. But he's unhappy with anything less than a loaded ball club.

Average Age 26½

Bears Just Seem Old; They'll Be Frisky Against Redskins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Chicago, Sept. 15.—You can save your pity for the "old and decrepit" Chicago Bears, the National Football League champions who got a fast count from many fans when they took a 16-0 punch from the College All-Stars to start their season.

The Bears are actually a young club, from the standpoint of average player age.

Wednesday night, when they tangle with the Redskins in the annual Armed Forces Charity exhibition at Soldier Field, the Bears will field a team averaging about 26½ years of age. The backfield will average 27 and the line a year younger. Before it's over as youthful a group of gridmen as the league boasts will get into action.

It's just that such timeless performers as Sid Luckman, George McAfee, et al, are still around.

Some of New Blood

Owner-coach George Halas, a sentimental sort who somehow manages to be a good businessman, a little regretfully points to his new crop, featured by All-America Bob Fenimore, 21; Quarterback Nick Sacrinty, 23; End Ed Sprinkle, 23, and Tackle Mike Jarmoluk, 24.

"We had to look toward the future," he says, "and thus some of our old timers had to leave. But last year we just couldn't turn 'em away, particularly in their first year out of service or after they'd stuck with during the war."

Gone from the outfit which has won six world championships since 1932 are standbys like Stydahar, Baisi, Berry and Schuehl. The oldest man with the squad now is End George Wilson, a 34-year-old veteran of 11 campaigns, and he'll be detached after the Redskin game.

That leaves Ray McLean, halfback, in his eighth year, as the club's "old man" at 32. No one else is over 30, the age of Luckman, Guard Ray Bray, End Ken Kavanaugh, and Dr. William Osmanski, the club dentist who doubles at fullback.

Can't Win All of Them

A total of 17 newcomers are on the squad as it now stands, 16 of them playing their first pro football. The other, Mike Holovak of Boston College fame, is in his second year after a season with the Los Angeles Rams.

Hales explains away the All-Star loss with a bitter "you can't win 'em all, as much as you'd like to," then reminds the grid world his boys have since come up with triumphs over Boston and Philadelphia. Not too impressive triumphs, he admits, but it is a green club with the exception of key players.

Skins, Packers May Lure Record Crowd in Benefit

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—Sponsors of the charity football game between the Washington Redskins and Green Bay Packers at Baltimore Stadium Sunday afternoon saw the possibility today of a new record crowd.

The annual charity tilt sponsored by the Variety Clubs of Washington and Baltimore drew a record 45,580 persons last year when the Redskins were defeated 20-14 by the Chicago Bears.

There will be considerable interest to Marylanders in the tilt, with two Cumberland players and one from Ridgely, W. Va., on the Redskin squad.

Duke Game May be Off

N. C. State Player Has Polio, Entire Squad Quarantined

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 15 (AP).—A 14-day quarantine of the North Carolina State College football team was imposed today after doctors had reported that one member of the squad was suffering from an acute case of infantile paralysis.

The quarantine was effective on September 11 when the player—Don McCormick, 20-year-old freshman blocking back from Greensboro—became ill.

The possibility arose that should another case of polio develop, cancellation of the Duke-State football game on September 27 might result from an extension of the quarantine.

Meanwhile, college officials were discussing the question of continuing football practice after Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State health officer, had issued a statement strongly advising those who had been exposed to the dread disease from taking strenuous exercise.

McCormick was excused from practice last Thursday after complaining he had difficulty in bending his neck. He later complained of pains in his right leg and examination by a doctor revealed he was running a fever. He was taken to Rex Hospital here.

Over the weekend, McCormick continued to have a temperature and Dr. A. C. Bulla, county health officer ordered the quarantine and announced that the case had been diagnosed as an "acute attack of polio." McCormick's condition was reported by the hospital as "fair."

The quarantine blankets the entire football squad, coaches, and managers. However, Dr. Bulla, in making his quarantine order, said the married coaches and players, who have not been exposed to McCormick, would be under "indirect quarantine," and could go to and from their homes. Children of concerned personnel, not exposed to McCormick, may continue to attend school, Dr. Bulla said.

Should the game be cancelled, it is unlikely that the teams would be able to play later in the season. Duke concludes its season by playing North Carolina on November 22; N. C. State finishes its play at Maryland November 29.

Louis-Walcott Bout Reset Dec. 5 With Title at Stake

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Joe Louis, who couldn't find a suitable opponent for a title bout a few weeks ago, changed his mind today and agreed to defend his world heavyweight championship for the twenty-fourth time against Jersey Joe Walcott of Camden, N. J., at Madison Square Garden December 5.

Originally scheduled to face Walcott in a 10-round nontitle tilt in the same arena, November 14, Louis agreed to the suggestion made by New York Athletic Commission Chairman Eddie Eagan that the bout be lengthened to the 15-round route with the championship at stake. Louis asked only more time to train with the result that the scrap was set back three weeks.

In announcing the title fight today, Sol Strauss, acting director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said that December 5 was the first available date at Madison Square Garden which would allow Louis sufficient time to train. That date, incidently, comes after the close of the football season, a fact which is expected to have a beneficial effect upon the gate receipts.

Louis Absent from Meeting

Louis, who was not present today, plans to start training at West Baden, Ind., within the next two weeks and to set up a camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J., about November 1 to complete his preparations. Walcott will begin training in Camden County, N. J., in about a week.

In requesting the change from a nontitle bout, Commisisoner Eagan pointed out that a defeat for the champion would cause some controversy and that Walcott certainly would be recognized as champion if he should win by a knockout.

Louis took the same attitude, his comanager, Marshall Miles, added.

"Joe thinks there's not much difference," Miles said today. "If he was knocked out or lost a 10 round decision it would be the same thing as if he lost the title."

Fought Mauriello Last

New York State rules require that championship bouts must be scheduled for 15 rounds and while shorter nontitle affairs are permitted, there is no provision for the possibility that a heavyweight champion might be beaten over the shorter route.

Louis, whose last title fight was his one-round victory over Tami has engaged in a few exhibitions Mauriello a year ago this month, since then and has kept in shape by playing golf. He now weighs about 214 pounds, which is "light" according to Trainer Manny Seamon, and will scale about 208 for the fight.

Failing Cards Beaten Again

St. Louis, Sept. 15.—In a free-hitting game in which five St. Louis pitchers were used, the New York Giants made it two in a row over the Cardinals today, winning 10-5. The defeat dropped the Cards 7½ games behind the idle Brooklyn Dodgers.

Alpha Brazle was able to get only one Giant out before being replaced by Murry Dickson in the first inning, the Polo Grounders getting five runs on doubles by Billy Rigney, Johnny Mize and Jack Lohrke, along with two walks and a single by Buddy Kerr.

Three more New Yorkers crossed the plate in the second, which saw Gerald Staley replace Dickson. Walker Cooper's thirty-second home run highlighted the inning.

The Cards got two runs back in their half of the second on doubles by Joe Medwick and Enos Slaughter and a single by Terry Moore.

The Cards knocked out starter Dave Koslo and Andy Hansen in the fifth with two more runs. Ken Trinkle took over and held the Cards scoreless the rest of the way to receive credit for the victory.

Catholic Has 1st Team in Seven Years

Head Coach Gene Augusterfer welcomed 69 candidates for the first Catholic University football team since 1940 as practice started yesterday on the C. U. Stadium gridiron.

A schedule of double workouts was initiated and will continue until classes begin. Augusterfer and his assistants, Duane Sands and Tom Chisari put the boys right to work despite heavy morning rains.

The story of Catholic niversity's return to intercollegiate football Uplay is a tribute to some sixty boys who, by their enthusiasm for the game, convinced the university authorities that they should be allowed to play.

Last year a group of about sixty Catholic students, under the direction of Athletic Director Eddie LaFond, gathered each fall afternoon and played informal football.

The University authorities were so impressed by this eagerness to play football on the part of their students that they allowed them to resume a regular schedule for games this fall.

With the exception of nine freshmen on this year's squad, the sixty boys who played against each other all last fall make up this year's squad.

It is to early for anyone to predict what kind of a season the Cardinals will have, but if enthusiasm for football means anything, it should be a good one.

Catholic's team will play five Mason Dixon Conference rivals and meet one outside team, the Newport News Apprentice School.

Garvin Grill Girls Win, 6-5

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 15.—The Garvin Grill girls team of Washington, D. C., remained in the world softball championships here tonight by defeating the Ramblers of Nashville, Tenn., 6-5.

It was a lower bracket game in which the loser was eliminated and Washington, which lost its opener to Fort Worth, won in strong fashion.

All six Garvin runs came in the second inning when the team batted around but made only one hit. Seven Nashville errors, plus loose play that couldn't be chalked up in the mistake column, accounted for the runs.

Kitty Casale, Washington pitcher allowed eight hits but was tough in the clutches. Washington was held to three hits by Madge Parkinson of Nashville.

Nats Still Doing About as Expected, Lose to Tigers, 7-2

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Detroit Tigers made it three in a row over the Nats, winning last night's Griffith Stadium encounter, 7-2.

It was the sixth straight defeat for Washington and was charged to Lefthander Mickey Haefner, his thirteenth against nine triumphs.

Stubby Overmire scored his eleventh against five setbacks for the Tigers.

Haefner issued a walk and a single in the first inning, but escaped trouble by engineering a double play on Rookie Outfielder Johnnie Groth's bounder to the box. His luck didn't hold out the next frame, however, as the Tigers put together three singles to take a 1-0 lead.

Their lead lasted only one inning as the Nats got to Overmire for two runs in the third. Eddie Yost's second single followed by singles by Tom McBride and Mickey Vernon and Stan Spence's fly to right did the trick.

The Tigers bounced back into a 3-2 lead in the sixth as Heafner lost his control, issuing three walks and forcing in both runs. He walked Lake with the sacks loaded to force in Kell, who walked to open the inning, and then passed Cullenbine, enabling Evers, who had singled, to score.

Overmire, meanwhile, was encountering very little difficulty. The only Nat to reach base in the fifth and sixth was Buddy Liwis who gained first as Lake booted his grounder. He was promptly erased in a double play.

Detroit added another run in the seventh on three more singles, Evers' third straight hit, driving Groth across with the fourth tally. Catcher Frank Mancusco averted more trouble for Heafner that inning when he threw out Evers at third on an attempted delayed steal to retire the side.

Sullivan git his third straight single to open the Nat seventh, but couldn't advance a step.

A's and Tribe Tied

Philadelphia, Sept. 15.—The Philadelphia As and Cleveland Indians were tied, 1-1, in the tenth inning of their game here tonight. Dick Fowler was on the mound for the As, while Bob Lemon was pitching for Cleveland.

Bosox Split With Chisox

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—After backing the idle New York Yankees into the American League Penant by losing the first game to the Chicago White Sox, 6-3, the Red Sox rebounded against Red Ruffing today to take the second half of a double-header, 7-5.

Dom DiMaggio, Bobby Doerr and Sam Mele homered for the Bosox during the nightcap.

While the rained-out Yankees huddled around the radio in their clubhouse they were thrilled by the reports of the White Sox 15-hit attack against Dave (Boo) Ferris, which Don Kolloway led with a homer, double and single, blows that enabled him to score two runs and drive in another.

Bob Kennedy and Thurman Tucker each scored twice to account for all the other Chicago tallies while Orval Grove was keeping all 11 Boston hits fairly well scattered before being relieved by Karl Caldwell with none out in the ninth.

The Croninmen wasted little time regaining their home lot mastery over the Chisox, for they banged out 13 hits, all but one against the veteran Charlie (Red) Ruffing, while taking the nightcap, 7-5.

Harry Dorish drew the pitching decision, although he was relieved by Charlie Stobbs, 18-year-old southpaw Norfolk, Va. pitching sensation, in the eighth. The youngster, who performed for the Lynn, New England League farm team this season, was taken out for Johnny Murphy after giving up a pass and then a single to Luke Appling.

N. Y. Idle, White Sox Eliminate Boston, 6-3

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Deep in the caverns of Yankee Stadium, without the voice of a single fan to cheer them on, the New York Yankees won the fifteenth American League pennant in their history today for a graying little guy who had reluctantly accepted the job of being their leader.

This wasn't one of the greater of the Yankee teams and it will remain for history to determine whether wrinkle-faced Bucky Harris was one of their greater managers.

But together, when few had expected them to do so, Harris and the Yankees captured not only the pennant as third-choice underdogs, but the hearts of baseball fans all over the Nation.

A Mild Party

That no fans were on hand for the "clinching party" in which player hugged player with no attempt at restraint, was the fault of the weather and the Chicago White Sox.

The weather rained out the scheduled game between the Yankees and the St. Louis Browns and the Chicago White Sox eliminated the last team with a mathematical possibility of catching the Yankees, beating the Red Sox, 6 to 3 in the first game of a double-header at Boston.

So the Yankees sat around in their chromium-trimmed swanky dressing room, stomping not one spiked shoe upon the turf at the stadium as they learned from Boston that they had "backed in" to the pennant.

"After 22 years it really is a great feeling to manage another pennant winner," Harris said. "It's a great club and a great bunch of fellows."

Harris said it was so long ago, he couldn't recall whether winning the pennant today gave him any greater thrill than when he took the flag at Washington in 1924 and 1925 as the "boy" manager of the Senators.

MacPhail Happiest

Locquacious Larry MacPhail, whose chief contribution to the club as president of the Yankees was that he persuaded Harris to take over the reins as field manager, was the noisiest and seemingly the happiest man in the celebration.

When the Yankee game with the Browns was rained out, players, reporters, photographers and club officials went to the dressing room where they listened to a play-by-play broadcast of the game in Boston.

As Dom DiMaggio, the Red Sox outfielder, flied out to end the game, they broke into yelling and back-slapping, but it wasn't a very noisy celebration.

Reporters said it was one of the quietest pennant-clinching parties they ever had attended. Later, the players went to MacPhail's plush Yankee Stadium Club, where along with newspapermen and others they were guests at a "cork-popping" clambake.

Coach Charley Dressen, who was persuaded to come to the Yankees from Brooklyn during the off-season, precipitating a controversy that stirred bitter feeling between the pending World Series aspirants, said that he was happier than even before in his baseball career.

"You know I've been on all three local clubs when they've won pennants," Dressen said. "But this was the happiest one because I'm back with my old boss, MacPhail."

Fourth Estate Wins Impressively in Marlboro Feature

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Marlboro Jockey Aubrey Snellings, who broke a leg at Delaware Park during the 1946 meeting was a visitor here. He is without crutches now and may return to action before the year is out. I received a telegram at the track today with a tip on a horse that didn't win. I suspect it was from Bert Shepperd, the one-legged pitcher once with the Nats. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who has been ill, returns to action on the Tuesday program. Boby Drury, leading rider at Timonium, is an Annapolis, Md., boy, who learned to ride by working horses at Laurel. Drury is 17 and is under contract to Bill Irvine, jr. He hopes to return to Laurel next month and hopes to make good on the big time. He is a natural lightweight and a likable youngster with the knack of rating horses. It is possible to ship a horse into Maryland despite the swamp fever precautions. However, the horse must not be from New England and must have a veterinarian's certificate of good health. See you on the rail.

BILL.

Rampart Wins At Garden St.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP).—Racing the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 3/5 over a sloppy track, Helene K. Haggerty's Rampart wore down Cain Hoy Stable's Bellwether to reach the wire a one-length victor in the Stromboli Purse today at Garden State Park.

Badly outdistanced, 10 lengths farther back, Mrs. W. E. Snell's Black Pepper got up for the show by a neck over Nydrie Stable's Highfortidies.

A heavy downpour sent the crowd of 17,602 scurrying beneath the stands as the horses went postward for the second race.

Rampart, a candidate for the Colonial and Vineland Handicaps, on her showing today virtually was assured of a starting place in the $10,000 added Colonial on September 24.

Rampart was a stoutly backed favorite and returned $4.10 straight.

Run BudRun Second, 4½ Lengths Back

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marboro, Md., Sept.—Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Fourth Estate didn't pay a hatful in today's feature race but the 6-year-old won by four and a half lengths in impressive fashion. The event was the Silesia Purse and R. N. Boener's Run Bud Run was second with Mrs. L. O. Roger's How Happy third.

Fourth Estate, ridden by Jockey C. Griggs, was the favorite at a $5.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:24 3/5 for the six and a half furlongs. The track was sloppy as the result of a downpour coming just before the program began. Rain in Baltimore and Washington this morning cut down attendence to 6500.

Griggs, a hard-working colored boy, rode a perfect race on Fourth Estate. He took the son of Flying Heels along in the third position early and Run Bud Run and How Happy did the front running. When Griggs asked Fourth Estate for speed, the belding responded to take command and it was all over but the pay-off.

The daily double paid $18.20 and two well-played horses figured. W. M. Richardson's Electric won the opener at $5.40 under the handling of apprentice B. Brady. H. Kesting's Kohinoor, with Apprentice Eddie Hopkins up, won the second at $6.80.

Jockey Raymond Holland won the fifth race, the day's secondary feature, aboard C. Wright's Verte and caused the mutuel department to hang out a $17 mutuel. He took the filly to the front early and she held on gamely to lead E. N. Kratz's Agency and A. S. Moore's Rippleby to the wire. The running time for the five and a half furlongs was 1:09 2/5.

36,329 See Quarantaine Snare Aqueduct Race

Aqeduct, N. Y., Sept. 15 (AP).—Before a crowd of Saturday proportions—36,329—Ogden Phipps' Quarantaine earned a photo triumph over C. V. Whitney's 1946 juvenile champion, First Flight, after the pair had raced heads apart from the start of today's swinging purse.

Only four started in the seven-furlong headliner for fillies and mares, but the event proved one of the most thrilling of the year. Quarantaine, carrying only 103 pounds to First Flight's 114, paid $11.30 and splashed through the slop in 1:25 flat under Hedley Woodhouse.

Jany Sets Swim Mark

Menton, France, Sept. 15 (AP).—Alex Jany of France surpassed the listed world record for the 100-meter free style today by swimming the distance in :55.8. He already is the holder of the world 200 and 400-meter titles.

The listed record for the century is :55.9 by Alan Ford of Yale University.

National Weather Summary

24-HOUR SUMMARY—The hurricane was reported 200 miles northeast of Nassau, Bahamas, at 11:30 a. m. (EST) Monday, moving west-northwestward at 12 to 14 miles per hour. (The inset map shows the position of the "Tropical Twister" while the adjacent arrow indicates the path the storm is moving.) Indications are the hurricane should pass 75 to 100 miles northeast of Abaco Island early tonight and veer northward. Coastal areas from Vero Beach, Fla., to Cape Hatteras have been requested to remain on the alert for further frequent advises. Ships are cautioned to avoid the severe hurricane.

It will be decidedly cooler and less humid west of the cold front shown from Maine to Florida. Cool northerly winds will be sweeping in behind this front as it continues its eastward movement about 20 miles per hour. Maximum temperatures will be in the 70s from New England through the Ohio Valley to Kentucky and Virginia, also in Montana, South Dakota and most of the Rockies. Southerly winds will bring somewhat warmer weather from the Central Plains to the Lakes region where afternoon readings will be in the 80s.

Showers and thunderstorms will develop east of the cold front in the affected areas from Florida to Virginia. Some widely scattered showers are also indicated for the Northern Plains and the Southwest. (See fotocast.)

The scientists say just as a tyrant is a common man gone mad so is a hurricane a small circular bundle of atmospheric wrath. As a hurricane begins its westward movement after birth it gains in intensity from increasing heat released by condensation. These intense storms tend to move around the Atlantic high pressure cell usually eventually moving eastward and spending their energy. When one of these tropical storms moves over land it loses its source of moisture and dissipates. At other times a hurricane may get a new lease on life by riding a front and regenerating a new storm wave. Since the best tools available to the forecaster are inadequate, the path a hurricane will follow is almost unpredictable.

Today's maximum temperature forecasts include Kansas City, 85; Washington and St. Louis, 80; New York and Philadelphia, 78; Nashville and Albany, 72; Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, 70; Pittsburgh and Buffalo, 78, and Milwaukee, 66.

Georgetown Prep Must Build Line To Pave Way for Strong Backfield

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Can a fast, hard-hitting backfield go places behind an inexperienced line?

That is the question Georgetown Prep football coach Orrel Mitchell is asking himself these days as he readies his team for Friday's opening game with Sidwell Friends.

Three experienced backfield men and two ends are back from last year's Prep team which won five games, lost three and tied one.

Tim Beyer, an all-prep choice last season and one of the best backs in Washington, will once again lead the Prep attack. Beyer, a hard-driving runner, Ken Bergmann and Frank Lyons are the returning backfield men.

Mitchell has Pat Werner, Tommy Crowley and Ed Claxton, all inexperienced but promising athletes, working out at the quarterback position. None of these boys has played under the T formation before, but all three are learning fast.

Other backs include Bill Bidwill, son of the late owner of the Chicago Cardinals, Charles Bidwell; Bob O'Donnell and John Awalt.

At the ends are Joe Gargan, a converted back, Tim Cashman, Dick Milloy and Gwinn Ordway. Gargan and Cashman are big and aggressive, and Ordway, a newcomer, is developing into a fine end.

The tackles are a question mark, with John Quinn, Jack Jarboe and Dave Kennedy fighting for first string status and Don Bucy and Austin Canfield in reserve.

Leo Brannigan, John Ruppert, Ray Falge and George Miller make up the guard squad and at center Mitchell has John (Jude) O'Donnell, a great prospect the coach believes will become one of the best centers in town. Mitchell coached O'Donnell's three brothers at Gonzaga before coming to Prep, and he says that the O'Donnell boys can play on his team any time. As center insurance Prep has Jerry Steis and Fred Altemus.

Mitchell is using a regular T formation with a balanced line instead of the "Tennessee T" which he tried last season. If his quarterbacks develop as expected and the line can open a few holes for Beyer, Bergmann or Lyons, the coach expects to make trouble for Prep's annual big objectives, Gonzaga and St. John's.

Gallorette, Miss Grillo Top Weighted in 'Cap

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—W. L. Brann's Gallorette, Maryland star, which needs one more major triumph to overtake the retired Busher as leading money winner of her sex, and Mrs. B. K. Douglas' Miss Grillo today were assigned equal topweight of 126 pounds for Saturday's $50,000 added Beldame Handicap.

Handicapper J. B. Campbell listed William Helis' Elpis, which led home Stymie, Bridal Flower and Gallorette in the Edgemere Handicap at Aqueduct, next at 123 pounds, along with Harry Warner's Honeymoon. Robert J. Kleberg's But Why Not follows at 120.

Three More Matmen In Elimination Meet

Three more wrestlers yesterday entered the elimination tournament scheduled tomorrow night at Turner's Arena to find an opponent for a title bout with Champion Frank Sexton, as the Turner management announced the list closed at midnight.

They are Stu Hart, Big Ben Morgan, 6-foot-6 Texan, and Joe Komroff. This raises to 11 the starting line-up, which includes Babe Sharkey, the former champion; Wladislaw Talun, the 6-foot-8 Pole; Farro Rinaldo, Big Ben Rosen, Steve Gob, Tiger Marsh, Red Ryan and Ace Freeman.

All-Sports Movies Listed at Trans Lux

The Trans-Lux Theater is presenting another all-sports show starting Thursday. Films on boxing, horse racing, basketball, water skiing and football are on the program. The boxing pictures include the Louis-Levinsky, Firpo-Brennan and Ross-Petrolle bouts.

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

WHILE CHESAPEAKE BAY and fresh-water fishing in the Potomac and Shenandoah Rivers are slowly coming out of the "dog day" stage, a number of first catches for offshore fishing have been scored during the period.

First was the 7-foot 3-inch, 55-pound sailfish caught by L. C. Sipe of Charlotte, N. C., while fishing off Southport, N. C. For the past three weeks sails have been consistently brought into the popular port.

Hatteras, N. C., reports the first sailfish catch of the season near the Diamond Shoals Lightship by K. D. Strickler of Norfolk, Va. The fish measured 6 feet 8 inches and weighed 43 pounds. On the same trip Strickler and his party caught three dolphin, seven amberjack and three false albacore. Fishermen report seeing large numbers of sailfish in the area.

Tarpon are also active, and Joe Massoletti, New York sportsman, returned to the port to resume his experimental fishing for the "silver kings."

SOUTHPORT and Morehead City, N. C., report the hottest kind of sailfishing. Bill Sharpe, Raleigh, N. C., our correspondent, writes that Bill Ballou recently added terrapin soup a la Maryland to his menu at the Waterside.

The delicacy at one time brought $100 a dozen in local markets. However, through the efforts of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, marshes were planted with terrapin propagated at the Beaufort hatchery and are now again fairly common in North Carolina waters, bringing about $1 a piece.

Another first for our own offshore fishing port, Ocean City, Md., is reported. Herman Reitz, Baltimore angler landed the first of the season, a sailfish measuring 8 feet 1½ inches in length and weighing 57 pounds.

Fishing for white marlin, Reitz got a terrific strike, the fish taking to air several times, and to the surprise of all was seen to be a sailfish.

The last sailfish to be caught off Ocean City, Md., was taken in 1941 and strangely enough it also was caught by Reitz.

Sain Fails In Bid for 20th Victory

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Bob Chipman stopped Johnny Sain short of his 20th victory of the season here today with nine-hit pitching to give the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Boston Braves.

Chipman carefully doled out hits, two of which were extra-base blows which led to Boston's two runs. Tommy Holmes' double and three walks gave the Braves a run in the first, and they added another in the fourth on Dick Culler's double and Sain's single.

Eddie Waitkus sparked today's victory with three hits, including the triple that was turned into a run in the first on Sain's wild pitch. He singled to start the fourth, and scored on Cliff Aberson's triple to center. The latter counted the winning run on Bill Nicholson's fly to right.

Although the Cubs took the series, 2 to 1, Boston held a 13-9 edge over Chicago for the season.

Cubs Get Schmidt From Phils on Waiver

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, in their third move within a month to bolster their sagging pitching staff, today picked up Fred Schmidt from the Philadelphia National League club on waivers.

A 30-year-old right-hander, Schmidt was acquired by Philadelphia from St. Louis last winter. He won five and lost eight with the Phillies this season.

Pirates Drop Phils to Last

Pittsburgh, Sept. 15 (AP).—Pirate batters enjoyed a hitting spree today which gave Pittsburgh a 12-2 victory over Philadelphia and enabled the Bucs to climb out of the National League cellar.

Only 2833 fans, the smallest crowd of the season, saw the Pirates push the Phils into last place.

Hank Greenberg collected his twenty-fifth homer of the season but Ralph Kiner was unable to boost his total past 49. He was limited to a single.

Pirate hurler Kirby Higbe scattered eight hits and was never in trouble while his mates were collecting 15 hits from three Philadelphia pitchers. The big Pirate inning came in the fifth with four runs on two hits. The victors scored in every inning but the second.

Virginia Oystermen Make Rich Haul in Raid

fused to take newsmen with them last night.

More than that, boatmen last night coldly declared their craft were not ready to sail, and they would not be ready to oyster for several days. Yet, at nightfall, five, and possibly seven boats were on their way.

Under a starlit, but moonless sky, they cruised around lanterns anchored over lucrative oyster beds.

The practice of rigging up the oil lamps for night operation, is not new, it was learned. The simple method of lashing a kerosene light in the center of an inflated auto tire innertube acts as a fifloating guide for their work. An anchor attached to the bouyant beacon is dropped over a known oyster bar and the boat's pilot manuvers in the darkness around the signal, dredging t fill the moat full of oysters before detection.

They encountered no opposition. There was no gunfire. No reaching fingers of red tracer bullets from river patrols appeared, as they did in the "oyster war" which ended last season in April.

They made their hauls undisturbed, and today more than one "early bird" has at least $100 in his pocket.

Returning to the safe harbor from which they sailed, the oystermen pulled their heavily laden boats up to Landon Curley's wharf and unloaded. Curley was up all night to supervise, he said. He said he bought more than 300 bushels at the $2 price.

A native of the beath, Curley is the only oyster packer still in business here. He denies controlling the oystermen with an iron will.

"I have nothing to say about whether they go out," he said. It's up to them. I could close up any time."

About the early season's price, Curley said, "They're not fat yet."

A check of the Maryland shore aboard the Tidewater Fisheries' boat "Pocomoke," showed that an oyster was the hardest thing to find. A sweeping run through a squall which struck here in the late afternoon, passed Cobb Island, St. Mary's Island and Blackstone Island, produced no oyster fishermen.

Capt. F. C. Cullison of Ridge, Md., supervisory inspector of Tidewater Fisheries, piloted the Pocomoke. He was out at dawn.

Cullison's crew was comprised of Capt. Guy Johnson of Rock Point, Md., and Inspector J. H. Fenhagen of Scotland, Md.

Picture Editor Knows River Men Well

Wood

Wood began his newspaper career as a reporter on the Washington Times in 1935. He became assistant picture editor of the Times-Herald in 1937, and joined The Washington Post as picture editor in 1939. He has also served with The Washington Post as an assistant city editor and as a national news writer.

During World War II, Wood saw action as a United States Marine Corps combat correspondent, covering landing at Peleliu, Okinawa and in North China.

Government Girls to Lose Potomac and Quam Halls

Some U. S. Workers Study Court Plea To Insure Rights In Loyalty Check

By Jerry Kluttz

Notes from my diary—

That those convenient Government Girl dormitories in West Potomac Park will be closed on November 15. The 776 civilian girls there will be urged to move across the Potomac to Arlington Farms which has more than 1000 vacancies. They are sure to protest.

Also, Quam Hall for Negro Government girls at Langston will be closed in two weeks. Its residents will be asked to move into Midway Hall. Earlier this year the Government closed its dormitories at Suitland, Md.

A letter to the girls in each hall will say a steady decline of occupants in the last eight months forces the Government to act because of economy reasons.

The National Capital Parks has been putting on the pressure to get the West Potomac group closed and torn down. At one time it had planned to put the rose gardens there.

However, the Navy operates one of the dormitories for its Waves. It has no immediate intentions of closing it.

That a group of Federal workers are looking into the possibility of appealing to the courts to stop the President's loyalty program. If the appeal is made, the employes will ask a Federal court to halt the program until additional safeguards are added to protect their civil rights.

That very soon—perhaps later this week—the President will make a public appeal to Federal agencies to find jobs for the able and qualified career employes who have been laid off in reductions of force. Several weeks ago he took up the problem with his cabinet. The President will emphasize that the jobless people must be qualified.

That the Civil Service Commission won't announce the results of any competitive test as long as it has a sizable number of jobless career people who can qualify for the jobs for which the test was given. For example, a test for top-grade economists was given last spring. The results of that exam could be announced, but they won't be until the displaced economists are placed.

That an Agriculture official called me yesterday to say that he got a big laugh—and then a shock—out of my story here on the Georgia girl who wrote the Treasury to ask for her "loyalty check." Since the story amused him, the official read it aloud to the half dozen people in his office. And a girl who must have had a bad Sunday night popped this irresistible question:

"Are we really going to get paid for being loyal?"

That the left-wing United Public Workers (CIO) has urged the FBI to abolish the use of photographs on its job application forms. UPWA Vice President Tom Richardson said such a move would assure freedom from race discrimination of job applicants.

That fewer than half of the competitors failed to pass the most recent Civil Service test here for stenographers and typists. The record shows: 3500 failures; 2350 passed the typist exam, and 675 the stenographer test.

However, Civil Service says the exam will not result in any large surplus of available stenographers and typists. In fact, most agencies are in need of them. The Army's Andrews Field has openings for CAF-3 and 4 stenographers. Apply to its personnel office.

That the Office of Education has made these appointments: Dr. Nolan D. Pullian to be specialist for State school administration; Dr. J. Dan Hull to be chief of the instructional problems section; Jane H. Franseth, specialist for rural schools; Ellsworth Tompkins, specialist for large high schools, and John H. Lloyd to be assistant chief of the information division.

That Civil Service late this month will announce a competitive contest for substitute railway postal clerk jobs at salaries of $1.14 an hour. Competition will be restricted to veterans and to incumbents who have served since August 28. But even so, Civil Service expects more than 100,000 to apply for it. The last such test was held in 1936. More than 200,000 applied at that time.

That Civil Service has ordered reemployment rights for those Federal workers who transfer to the Greek and Turkish aid missions.

That 11 Civil Service Commission employes were injured several days ago when an elevator in the Victor Building fell four floors. All the injured have been asked to go to the Public Health Service for treatment and physicals.

Five Birthdays in Year

It was simply a case of too many birthdays for Willie Woolsey, 51, no fixed address. Charged with being drunk, he told Judge Armond W. Scott in Municipal Court yesterday he was merely celebrating his birthday.

"My records show," Scott responded, "that you've had five birthdays this year. Fifteen dollars or five days."

Operations to Be Televised At D. C. Medical Assembly

The first public television of surgeons performing operations will be broadcast here during the forthcoming eighteenth annual Scientific Assembly of the District Medical Society.

The operations, one an appendectomy, will be televised from Georgetown and Doctors Hospitals, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Robert H. Groh, assembly chairman. The "telecasts," Dr. Groh said, will aim at the operating room procedure rather than dwell on technical aspects of the operation.

Program Plans Revelled

Program for the assembly, to be conducted here October 6-7-8, were disclosed yesterday.

Problem Children in Schools May Reflect Problem Parents

By George C. Ruhland, M. D.
District Health Officer

A majority of the children who are returning to their school tasks are doing so with anticipation of joyful, satisfying experiences. Most parents expect a continuing educational growth, adequate achievement, and better health for their children. The community counts on the schools to carry on their vital assignments for another year.

To the child going to school for the first time, an entirely new world is opened. Opening the door to school life is not an easy task for the individual child.

The fuller meaning of parenthood is brought into sharp focus at this time. With the advent of school life, parents must share their responsibility, or rather relinquish some of it, to the teachers, the school nurses, the school physicians, the school dentists, and others concerned with providing for their children's educational progress, health and welfare.. If up until this time you have prepared your child to be self-reliant, independent, yet cooperative, entrance to school will be easily accomplished.

If, on the other hand, your child is self-centered, dependent, and rebellious, the start of school may be a most difficult experience. And the task of adjusting to the school situation will create a problem that parents must help the child face.

Whether your child likes school depends upon your attitude toward your work and his work of attending school. Your child will sense your attitude. If your attitude is such that school is a worthwhile task, a wholesome venture, this attitude will be caught.

Problem children, as they are often called in school, reflect the fact that their parents are probably problem parents. The conflicts of parents create untold problems for the child. Thus, the child's attitude toward school is influenced tremendously by that of his parents.

Conflicts in the child's life that affect his adjustment to school and to life may occur despite your cooperative guidance and counsel, and despite the teachers' efforts to help your child meet the problems confronting him. Your family physician should, of course, be consulted first, and then if necessary or advisable your family physician may wish to consult Health Department's Bureau of Mental Hygiene. This bureau cooperates wholeheartedly with the schools in attempting to solve the difficulties and the problems with which your child may be faced.

How well your child does in school depends largely upon your attitude, parents, toward school and the state of your child's health.

Dr. Ruhland's final article in this series will appear in tomorrow's paper. In this article the series will be summarized and the significant points reiterated.

Further information on the aspects of mental hygiene and related guidance activities may be obtained from Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, Director, Bureau of Mental Hygiene, D. C. Health Department, National 6000, Extension 2194.

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 14 (AP).—State police said today they had placed a charge of assault with intent to kill against Robert Cassidy in connection with the shooting last night of his brother, Purroy Wilt.

Wilt was admitted to Maryland General Hospital in critical condition with a .22-caliber bullet wound in the abdomen. Hospital authorities today described his condition as "very satisfactory."

Real Estate Group Seeks Defense Funds

National Association Plans to Get $1 Each From 40,000 Members

The National Association of Real Estate Board, indicated here August 27 by a grand jury for alleged antitrust violations, has launched a country-wide campaign to raise "defense" funds.

Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the national association, said yesterday the drive was planned both as a money-raising venture and for the "psychological" effect.

"If this thing develops into a big legal battle with all the trimmings—and it sure looks that way—we want as many active members behind us as we can get," Nelson declared.

He said letters have been sent to 940 real estate boards in the United States, Honolulu and Manila, seeking $1 contributions from each of an estimated 40,000 members.

"The money is just pouring in," Nelson said. "Everybody is sore as hell. It's just politics . . . that's all it is."

He said realtors want to "get rid of this centralized power" and "return to representative Government instead of Government by bureaucracies."

Reporting member boards plan "to make all the noise we can" prior to further court action October 15, Nelsen dubbed the whole situation "just one more instance of the battle of all industry against this Administration."

He said the Justice Department action, charging fixing of commission rates in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, was timed to come "as soon as Congress got out of town.

A spokesman for the Washington Real Estate Board, which was simultaneously indicted by the Government, acknowledged receipt of the fund-raising plea but reported "no action has been taken—we haven't even discussed it."

The Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board, however, called a meeting for 8 p. m. Thursday at the Cherrydale Fire Department auditorium, at which Nelson is scheduled to discuss need for cooperation in the "defense" drive.

In a bulletin, board members were urged to "send your check for one dollar . . . let's make this a personal matter . . . send it today."

The N.A.R.E.B. and the Washington board pleaded not guilty in District Court September 4 to the antitrust charges. Attorneys for both organizations were given permission by Justice Jennings Bailey to withdraw the plea and file an additional plea or other motion by October 15.

Jury Ends Clegg Case Testimony

Inspector Truscott And 3 Officers Of Sex Squad Are Witnesses

The Federal grand jury hearing evidence on complaint of police brutality by Julius Willie Clegg yesterday completed taking testimony. No decision was announced immediately.

Witnesses yesterday, climaxing the four afternoon sessions of the jurors, included Detective Chief Inspector Floyd A. Truscott and three officers of the police sex squad.

Clegg, 26-year-old Negro war veteran who has charged he was beaten, cursed and threatened by two detective sergeants of the sex squad, waited outside the jury room yesterday for possible recall as a witness. He received no call to testify again.

Yesterday's witnesses, in addition to Truscott, who headed police department investigation of Clegg's complaint, were Acting Police Lieutenant Richard McCarthy, head of the police sex squad; and Detective Sergts. David S. Ennie and Alexander J. Kapsol, of the sex squad. Their roles in the Clegg case have never been made public.

All four of the police officers declined comment following their appearances before the grand jury.

Clegg, an employe of The Washington Post, has charged he was mistreated during 34 hours police held him incommunicado after he was picked up by police at 6 a. m. August 2, on complaint of molesting a white woman waitress. He was subsequently released without charge.

Clegg later picked the two detective sergeants from a lineup of 10 men as the ones he said beat him in an attempt to force him to sign a prepared statement confessing the alleged offense. He said he refused to sign the prepared statement. Police have withheld identity of the two detectives pending grand jury action.

Barrett Feted As Director Of Boys Club

Induction of Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett as a member of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club board of directors was observed with a dinner in his honor last night.

"It is called the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. Let us make it really metropolitan in membership," Chief Barrett said at the dinner in the Ambassador Hotel, adding that he favored assignment of policemn to each club.

Chief Engineer Clement V. Murphy of the District Fire Department, also named to the board, was an honored guest at the affair, which was attended by police inspectors, board members and guests.

Chief Barrett's interest in boys'

U.S. Employe Wins Fight On D. C. Tax

Appellate Court Upholds Man Who Maintains Legal Residence in Texas

An Internal Revenue Division counsel, legal resident of Texas, yesterday won a court fight against payment of a 1940 District income tax of $56.13, even though he had admitted that under certain circumstances he may remain in the District indefinitely.

The attorney, Clifford G. Beckham, of the Highlands Apartment, who, with his wife, Mabel, maintains a residence at Fort Worth, had asserted that he had a fixed intention to return to the Lone Star State whenever he should be separated from the service here.

The opinion, in favor of Beckham, was handed down by the United States Court of Appeals here and reversed a ruling of the District Board of Tax Appeals.

Associate Justices Bennett Champ Clark and Harold M. Stephens joined in the majority opinion with Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton dissenting.

The majority opinion cited the case of Collier vs. the United States, a case decided last May, in which Collier, a Government employe, who paid taxes in New Hampshire, was held not liable to taxation here since he showed fixed intention to return to his native State.

Mystery Men Puzzle U. S. Zone Officers

Passau, Germany, Sept. 14 (AP).—Despite heavily reinforced patrols on both sides of the German-Austrian border, armed and uniformed men claiming to be Ukrainian refugees from communism are continuing to slip into the American occupation zone of Germany, Army officials said today.

Since the first band of 35 men surrendered peacefully to American constabulary troops near Passau last Thursday, four more men have been rounded up in the same region. All 39 were disarmed of machine guns, hand grenades and rifles, and interned at Deggendorf under United States military guard.

Many prisoners, it was said unofficially, have sworn to commit suicide rather than return to the Soviet Union. It has not been determined whether Russian authorities would seek their custody.

Army Presses Investigation

Acknowledging the fact the incident might possibly have far-reaching international complications, high Army officers clamped a tight secrecy on their investigation.

Officials indicated they were not fully convinced of the truth of the story of the 39, who claimed to be anti-Communist followers in the Ukraine of a mysterious "General Bendera." They claimed also they had several thousand comrades in the region of the Polish-Russian border, some of whom they believe are following them to Germany.

Might Be Spies

A high military source said the investigators were considering that they might be renegades from the Russian army or anti-Communist guerillas from Poland or bandits fleeing for their lives. Or, he added, possibly even spies.

One unofficial source said the "Benderavicis," as the men styled themselves, claimed to be part of a Ukrainian independence movement which once had the support of more than one million armed men, and hoped to obtain American assistance in their anti-Communist campaign.

They arrived tattered, dirty, weary and hungry, and said it took them three months to travel through Communist territory to Germany, that they fought off Russian and Polish troops on the way and engaged in skirmishes with Czechoslovak secret police.

1st Precinct Police Move To New Home

Sergt. George Weaver brings police records to the Municipal Building

Policemen in the First Precinct set up house-keeping yesterday in tehir new quarters in a second floor wing of the Municipal Center at 300 Indiana ave. nw.

Business went on as usual amid the confusion of installing telephones and moving furniture into place.

The men were not as happy as they might have been about the new bright and airy quarters. Most of them hold a soft spot in their hearts for the old decrepit station house at 431 New Jersey ave. nw.

And none were too happy about having to leave behind their four mascots—the best rat-catching cats in town.

Capt. Robert Pearce, commanding officer, supervised the moving with dismay.

"It will take at least a week to get settled down," he mourned.

Four of the men have offered to provide homes for mascots for "sentimental reasons," they said.

Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, ordered the move last July.

The old building, unsanitary, fire hazardous and rat-infested, was erected 85 years ago. In the many years since then, it has seen prisoners of all kinds come and go, many time and again.

Its cells have housed the drunks and the bums, the petty thieves and murders. The first record of arrest stated that on February 24, 1862, a William Glenn, a Union soldier, was charged as drunk and disorderly.

Its books have carried reports of all kinds. The most famous were reports on the assasinations of Presidents Lincoln and Garfield.

D. C. Heads Act Today on New Crime Report Plan

Barrett Expected To Get Approval For System Based On FBI Suggestions

The District Commissioners are expected to act today on recommendations from Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, that a new crime reporting system be set up in the Police Department.

Indications yesterday were that the Commissioners will give Barrett the go ahead signal. All of the Commissioners have already studied the report.

Commissioner John Russell Young said he has already indorsed the recommendations 100 per cent.

Commissioner Guy Mason declared: "I think it is an excellent report. I think Major Barrett's recommendations should be put in effect immediately."

New Office Proposed

They will act officially on the recommendations at this morning's meeting, which Barrett and Budget Officer Walter Fowler are expected to attend.

In his report, Barrett recommended a new office, to be known as the records and communications division. This would include three separate bureaus—a Records Bureau, where all Police Department records would be carried centrally; a Communications Bureau, centralizing the telephone, teletype and radio dispatchers; and an Indentification Bureau.

His recommendations were based on suggestions from the Federal Bureau of Investigation. At his request the FBI had studied crime reporting methods here after The Washington Post exposed a police department practice of withholding crime reports from official statistics.

Finances to Be Discussed

Barrett's recommendation also called for appointment of a new captain, two lieutenants and two sergeants to serve as supervisory personnel in the new office.

At the time the report was sent to the Commissioners last week, Barrett explained that it might be necessary for them to ask for immediate appropriations for enough funds to carry out the reform. He also stated that he had not yet determined how much money would be needed.

Subsequently, Barrett said that he had determined that funds are available for the personnel to do the job.

Mason said yesterday that he was in favor of setting up a central office for reports, which he felt would be a big help in controlling crime. Financing the reform, however, will be a major point of discussion at the meeting today, he added.

Business Houses Closed, Observing Rosh Hashonah

Jewish congregations here yesterday continued observance of Rosh Hoshanah.

The new year holidays marked the entrance of the Jewish year, 5708. Numerous business establishments were closed in observance of the event.

Reformed temples closed the celebration last night. Orthodox and conservative groups will continue prayers until sundown today.

Fines Promised For Violators of Anti-Noise Law

Violators of the District's anti-noise regulations are going to find out that silence is golden.

That was the promise made yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King who said he would ask steep fines for those who, to quote the law, "operate a device for intensification of the human voice in such a way as to disturb the peace and quiet of the neighborhood." Maximum penalty is $300 fine and 90 days.

Clark's statement grew out of a multitude of complaints that have been flooding his office concerning blaring radios outside commercial houses, sound trucks and similar aids to commercial promotion.

Maryland U. Rejects Negro Veteran Because of 'Provisional Status'

Va.; Jeane Pons, 4715 47th st. nw.; George Hopkins of College Park, Md.; Katherine Mavrides of Baltimore, and Evelyn West of 4800 Suitland rd. se., register for courses with Mary Sesson of the Maryland University registration committee

University of Maryland officials yesterday refused to register a 31-year-old Negro war veteran who previously had been admitted to the university's graduate school under a "provisional status."

Dean Charles O. Appleman, of the graduate school, said Wilmore B. Leonard, of Salisbury, Md., had been tentatively admitted with the knowledge that he was a Negro, but was later turned down because the school this year is rejecting all students who were accepted provisionally.

Provisional status, he explained, is given all applicants for the graduate school whose previous scholastic record is not completely satisfactory, or those who have failed to make up undergraduate deficiencies.

"We are not taking anyone who is not thoroughly prepared," Dean Appleman said.

Leonard said he had not received a letter which university offiials said was mailed last Friday, informing him that he would otn be accepted at the university.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, said Leonard did not come to see him after he was turned down by the registrar. However, he suported Dean Appleman's explanation of Leonard's rejection and said it was "purely a matter of other applicants having better records."

Yesterday's registration marked the opening of a week that is expected to bring an all-time record enrollment at the school, with about 3000 students having applied for admission.

Officials estimate tht about 9000 students will attend the College Park branch, with an additional 300 enrolled at the professional schools in Baltimore.

Rear Admiral Pugh Scores 'Assembly Line' Medicine

Existence of an "assembly-line system of medicine" in America was charged yesterday by Rear Admiral H. L. Pugh, deputy surgeon general of the Navy.

Too little attention is now paid to "the personal patient-physician relationship," Admiral Pug told a convocation marking opening of George Washington University Medical School's 124th academic year.

Pugh urged students to "look at the sick person as an individualU rather than as a case," promising that the result will be greater rewards in "both satisfaction and in money."

Lambasting the "great paucity" of studies in the a "humnities" taken by medical students, Pugh said that, in consequence, we "have a course in medicine that is highly technical and produces medical men who are scientists and technicians but not scholars." He deplored a "tendency" to depend "too much upon laboratory and technical procedures and to regard too lightly the personality and feelings of the patient."

Admiral Pugh said the high cost and lengthiness of a medical education has made the profession "almost prehibitive to anyone but those with a considerable amount of financial assistance." He dubbed this "unfortunate . . . for it tends to limit the candidates to a certain economic group."

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the School of Medicine, pointed out that more than one-half of the hospital beds in this country are occupied by mentally ill patients. We must, he declared, be better qualified to meet the problems of psychosomatic medicine.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, greeted the students. Later, Martin Luis Drago, counselor of the Argentine Embassy, presented a set of atlases to the school in behalf of the Ambassador, at a luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel.

Gaming Trials Open Today In St. Mary's

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 15.—Trial has been tentatively set for tomorrow in the cases of 24 person sindicted in St. Mary's County last June on charges of violating gaming laws.

In his charge to the fall grand jury today, Associate Judge John B. Gray, jr., of the Seveenth Judicial Circuit, said reported illegal operation of slot machines and other forms of gambling had become "a troublesome matter which has grown like a snowball."

He demanded that "something be done about it," saying there were two courses of action open to the jury.

"One is to investigate conditions and return indictments when sufficient evidence is found. "The other is to investigate the county's public officials to determine whether they are condoning law violations; and, if so, whether thei rattitude is due to fear of their political skins or an even more sinister motive."

The grand jury is scheduled to report tomorrow morning on 10 criminal presentments, one of them the case of a 22-year-old sailor held in the slaying of Mrs. Julia Katoma, 35, wife of a Navy officer at Tall Timbers, Md., on July 23. The defendant is Seaman 1/c Joseph Daniel Brouiklette, who was arrested at the Patuxent River Naval Air Base the day after the slaying.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—A suit filed here today, sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, asks damages of $5000 from the Norfolk and Western Railway Co. and one of its conductors on behalf of Alfreda L. Madison, Richmond negro school teacher, alleging discrimination.

The motion of the woman, who resided at 1318 First st. sw., Washington, during the summer, but recently returned to Richmond to resume a teaching post, set forth that on July 15 she bought a round-trip ticket from Washington to Norfolk. She traveled to Richmond by way of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad and at Richmond changed to the Norfolk and Western, she said.

The suit, filed in Law and Equity Court, declares that when she entered a "semi deluxe" car at Richmond she was asked by the conductor, L. L. Crowder of Richmond, to go into another car. This she refused because the other car was "one-half baggage coach and the other half an old dilapidated coach with very few, if any, of the comforts and conveniences of the coach in which I was sitting."

Later, she set forth, two white men in civilian clothes threatened her with arrest and improsinment unless she did as requested. She complied, the motion for judgment continued, "in fear of further molestation, assault and embarrassment."

Martin A. Martin, negro attorney, said he was handling the case for the NAACP.

The state executives' group will resume work with members of the House Ways and Meams and the Senate Finance Committee.

Governor Lane also plans a trip to Ashville, N. C., where the conference of Southern Governors will meet October 13 to 15.

Prince Georges Lid on Tight, Chief Asserts

There were no arrests as Prince Georges County closed down on gambling yesterday because, said Police Chief Ralph W. Brown, there was no gambling.

On Bladensburg rd., near the District line, a reporter for The Washington Post found Jimmy's one of the county's best known gambling establishments, locked tight.

"Closed until the end of the racing season," a watchman said.

Chief Brown, however, repeated his crackdown order and declared it "farthest from the truth" that the county's gambling places "are going to be allowed to open some time later."

"Those places are being shut," he said, "and will be kept shut."

His police said they already had whiffed news that some gamblers were departing for nearby areas of less stringent regulation.

"And that on the first day of the crackdown, too," they pointed out.

Chief Brown announced Saturday hewould "hit like a ton of bricks" any gambling place he found open after Sunday and said he had given such instructions to members of his force.

Tuck Stays Mum In Furore Over Kirchner Post

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15.—Governor Tuck today refrained from adding any official comment to the furore churned up in the State Apprenticeship Council over the appointment of J. Fred Kirchner of Alexandria as new director of the apprenticeship program.

Mr. Tuck said merely "no comment," with the plain indication he would follow his cusomary policy of standing behind his department head until circumstances justified his intervention.

The controversy was generated by Labor Commissioner John Hall's appointment of Kirchner. L. Gordon Sheain of Richmond, resigned in protest, with the assertion he didn't believe Kirchner qualified for the post.

Richard Le Gallienne Dies; Famed Poet and Novelist

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—The death of Richard le Gallienne, 81, poet and novelist, in Menton, France, yesterday was reported France, yesterday was reported today by Charles Hanson Towne, in a cablegram from the poet's widow.

Le Gallienne

le Gallienne was the father of actress Eva le Gallienne and had lived in France for many years.

When Nazi troops marched into Paris in 1940, le Gallienne took refuge in Monte Carlo. There he continued to write a column for the New York Sun through the early years of the war.

Scholar, poet, essayist, novelist, journalist, le Gallienne found his greatest inspiration in th atmosphere of the "Old Paris" which existed with little change from the nineteenth century to the second world war.

His writings were marked by an optimism, an interest in the past, a conviction that the principles of his youth still would triumph.

He was called the "foremost master of lyric writing in English," and editors knew him as a man of encyclopedic versatility.

Born in Liverpool

He was born in Liverpool, January 20, 1866, of mixed English, French, Irish and Scotch stock.

At the age of 16 he left Liverpool College to become a clerk in a shipping office. He went to London when he was 20.

Poetry, fiction and essays came from his pen in rapid succession. "The Quest of The Golden Girl" was his first popular success.

His first wife, Mildred Lee, died in 1894. In 1897 he married Julie Norregaard, a Danish writer. Their daughter, Eva, the actress, was born January 11, 1899, in London.

For many years critics were inclined to regard his prose as surpassing his poetry. He will probably be best remembered as a poet, however.

Best as Poet

Author of more than a score of volumes, he received greatest critical acclaim for these: "English Poems" (1892); Robert Louis Stevenson: An Elegy, and Other Poems" (1895); "New Poems" (1910); "The Lonely Dancer" (1913); "The Junk Man and Other Poems" (1920); and "A Jongleur Strayed" (1922).

Although he delivered his first lecture in the United States in the early nineties, he was never widely recognized until his duaghter, Eva, gained fame a san actress on the American stage.

He lived alternately in England, the United States and France. It was in France that he seemed the happiest. In Paris and in the south of France he found still existing the "romantic flavor of the past which to him was rich in memories of Swinburne, Robert Louis Stevenson, and his friends of "the mauve decade."

Seas Hamper Search for Body of Girl

High seas in Chesapeake Bay hampered efforts yesterday to recover the body of the four-year-old daughter of a French Embassy official, who drowned with her mother Saturday as the two officials struggled for safety.

The girl, Elizabeth Blanc, and her mother, Mrs. Paul J. Blanc, wife of the assistant to the financial of the Embassy, drowned off Cove Point Lighthouse, near Solomons, Md.

Mrs. Blanc's body was recovered an hour later, and the Coast Guard has been searching since for that of the daughter.

Teh child slipped off into deep water and her mother plunged in after her, witnesses said. Both weer swept away before they could be rescued.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanc, Elizabeth, and their other two children, Bab, 8, and Frederick, 1, had driven to Cove Point Beach from Solomons to attend a beach party.

Mrs. Blanc was the former Jessie Anne Foley of St. Paul Minn. The Blancs were married there in 1938. During World War II she lived in France with her husband and family. Since coming to Washington they had made their home at 4352 Windom pl. nw.

Funeral arangements are being delayed in the hope that Elizabeth's body may be recovered.

In Memoriam

HICKS, IRVING L. In memory of husband and father, IRVING L. HICKS, who was suddenly called away September 16, 1945.
The blow was hard,
The pain was severe;
Little we thought
That death was near.
Only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting
Without farewell;
Memories are treasures
No one can steal,
And death leaves heartaches
That nothing can heal.
Some have forgotten you
Now that you are gone,
But we will remember
No matter how long.
HIS WIFE (BEA), MRS. MABEL J. HICKS, AND SONS, PAT AND JERRY.

Celebrities at Every Table

Season's In Full Flower In Manhattan

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THOUGH SIDEWALKS quivered with heat and affluent citizens, lolled longer on Long Island, a brisk nip through Manhattan's more expensive bistros and shops proved the new season in full flower. Fashionable feminine gams were really inclosed in smoke-dark stockings, every other shoe was ankle strapped, calves were concealed by sundown if not before.

Only uncertainty was headgear. At Colony restaurant some wore hats with aigrettes jutting from foreheads, while a few clung to summer straws. At John Frederics the boys were having fun with feathers and big platters—platters fringed with bobbed feather dusters, crownless halos aigretted and trailing wispy veiling, chenille cocktail hats knitted with gold and silver sequins, and trimmed with crescents of gilded coq feathers.

Vogue's fashion editor, Bettina Wilson, hastening back from Paris last week to marry Bill Ballard, caused a near riot in a crimson Dior creation, its broadcloth skirt pleated voluptuously as a kilt, and circling her neck a three-string dogcollar of dime-sized rhinestones. Only nonsubscribers to fashion's new deal are Saks' Sophie and Hollywood's Adrian. Adrian and his pint-sized wife, Janet Gaynor, are in town. He's to show his collection privately at the St. Regis. On the radio he's debating against the new styles with Bonwit Teller's Fira Benenson as opponent.

Steak for Anita

A SHOAL OF CELEBRITIES were aircooling at the Colony. Skinny Cole Porter, who's concentrating on movie music this year, table hopped. Anita Loos showed she was in the chips by ordering steak, and the Geoffrey Gates (she was Harry Hopkins' widow) dropped in the day before their wedding. Both are so good looking, so obviously in love, it's a pleasure to watch them.

Michael Arlen, the "Green Hat" author, more dapper than ever since his lucrative Hollywood jobs, and Adele Astaire (now Mrs. Kingman Douglass) subdued in dress but side-splitting about her recent South African trip, and the Garson Kanins were all there.

Egypt's Ambassador Hassan, down from Washington on a pre-United Nations visit, and a brace of our doughtiest former Ambassadors—Jimmy Gerard and Henry Fletcher—helped dilute the Hollywood flavor.

Prices Rival Skyscrapers

THE SKYROCKETING food prices are being reflected only too quickly on New York menus. Dining on the St. Regis roof, if you feel the urge for roast beef, it will set your beau back six bucks. On your own at Hamburger Heaven, the de luxe dab of meat now costs 40 cents. A pair of lamb chops, plus a spoonful of pureed carrots at the Colony comes to $2.25. Yet new restaurants are springing up like mushrooms.

Newest is the Town Penguin, run by waddly David Cowles. Cowles' first penguin adventure which folded some years ago was backed by Evalyn Walsh McLean's son, Jock, who once kept a brace of penguins in a hotel bathtub.

The Cowles bistro on East 65th street has become mecca for those liking good food, seasoned with mine host's type of salty conversation.

Dear Noel

NOEL COWARD, oozing more sardonic charm than ever, is being widely entertained by the social theatrical cognoscenti. At a dinner given by cinemaland's George Cukor, Coward gave a fascinating spiel on writing. He hammered out "Blithe Spirit," which netted him over a million dollars, in seven days. Stories though, he writes painstakingly in longhand. Claims anyone dictating writes badly since they tend to act rather than think. Besides fashions, the United Nations and Dear Noel, New York's haute monde is talking about tennis star, Jack Kramer, and the three Gracida brothers, who make Mexico's triumphant polo team. The Latinos, all of whom have wonderful nicknames have wiped up the crack American teams.

Getting their tickets for the Connecticut Avenue Fashion Show are Miss Anne Dickinson (center), senior at Smith College, and Miss Katherine Colean, sophomore at Smith. Mrs. Alexander S. Wotherspoon (left) is chairman of tickets for the fashion show to be held October 2 and 3 at the Mayflower Hotel. Proceeds will go to the Smith College Club scholarship fund

'Lady Windermere' Sets Pace For Today's Stuffed Styles

By Peggy Preston

IF YOU'RE looking for a scapegoat in today's fashion crisis you might pick on Cecil Beaton, the British designer who created the costumes for the current revival of Oscar Wilde's 1892 comedy, "Lady Windermere's Fan."

Washingtonians who attended the local opening of the play at the National Theater last night were treated to a fabulous display of costumes from the "Gay '90's." And those who were in a mood for comparisons, noted some definite similarities between Miss Skinner's lavish ensembles and those that are today's decree from high-fashion centers in Paris and New York.

Perhaps Mr. Beaton didn't mean to start anything when he went to work on "Lady Windermere" clothes two years ago in London. But, unwittingly or not, he dramatized several fashion items which have come right home to roost in our fall wardrobes. In fact, there are fashion authorities who maintain that the play has been the greatest single source of inspiration for the 1947's styles.

They point, for instance, to the lavish use of lace, jet and braid in Mr. Beaton's costumes and the bold, clear colors. The "Lady Windermere Sleeve," a frilly, lacy affair that ripples out below the elbow, has been extensively copied by current stylists. And, of course, there is what Mr. Beaton describes as the "over-stuffed look" of the whole collection of Victorian gowns. Critics of modern fashions are using the same phrase.

However, there is at least one gratifying difference between the Beaton clothes and our own. Ours weigh less. The modern woman feels overburdened if she wears five pounds of clothing. But Lady Windermere and her friends struggle through their day with 40 or 50 pounds on their backs. The grande dames of the gaslight era felt positively undressed in anything under that amount.

Mr. Beaton, in designing the costumes for the play, refused to spare Lady Windermere a single ounce. Twenty yards and more of material were put into each gown. A black velvet evening wrap, worn by Cornelia Otis Skinner, star of the comedy, weighs 50 pounds.

Every yard of material used in the costumes was dyed to order. Over 200 yards of satin, 40 yards of taffeta, 75 yards of other silk, 65 yards of damask were turned into the dramatic yellows, pinks and crimsons which Mr. Beaton demanded.

Statistics on the trimmings for the elaborate costume are equally fantastic. Eight hundred buttercups of yellow silk were made for the garlands on one dress and the bouquet which accompanies it has 48 of the tiny flowers. And 100,000 sequins were sewed into two of the hand-embroidered ball gowns.

Motley—Brown

The military wedding of Miss Lillian Mary Brown and Lieut. (j. g.) Arthur William Motley, jr., took place September 6 at Dixie Kiefer Memorial Chapel, Quonset Point, R. I. The Rev. William J. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hancock Brown of Providence, R. I., was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin, and her veil of illusion fell from a small cap of net. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of white roses and stephanotis centered with an orchid.

Miss Mary Lou Motley, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, clad in pale green chiffon and carrying yellow roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Kathie Henry and Miss Marge Feeney, wore yellow chiffon and carried yellow gladioli. Miss Regina Martin was junior bridesmaid, costumed in baby blue chiffon, carrying a colonial bouquet of mixed flowers.

Robert E. Motley, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The honor guard included Lieut. John Cooley, Lieut. (j. g.) Robert Rich, Lieut. (j. g.) William Burke, Lieut. (j. g.) Alvin Purpoint, Lieut. (j. g.) Donald Gately and Lieut. (j. g.) Gilbert Tracy.

looks at 1948

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

Adele Simpson fashions are so advanced they're 1948. But don't miss the thrill of them this Fall. They're tonic. They reinstate something once known and long forgotten. Something known as style.

Look for an elasticized waistlet inside many of these dresses. It whittles the waistline and midriff beyond belief. The black wool coat-dress, sketched, has the waistlet, also a bustle drape.

Adele Simpson drapes everything, even the plaid tweed skirt of a suit. She glues material to you at one point, piles it on at another, and all her skirts say length with an exclamation point.

Muffler suits make you feel as though you had been freezing your neck and ears for years. We show here a charming muffler suit, with wrap-around skirt. Time and again, Adele Simpson takes the edge off sharp shoulders with shawls. Most of them are fringed.

All these fashions are high spirited. There's another side of the Adele Simpson picture: a close-wrapped Dolman jacket, worn with cocktail and dinner lengths. This silhouette has a languid slinky grace.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Hanging by a Thread, Wife's Life Is Saved When Husband's Buddy, Wanton Reveler, Gives His Blood; Sister Fears a Lurking Infection

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My younger sister, who just recently had a baby, was quite a sick girl and needed a couple of blood transfusions. Naturally we asked everyone we knew to do us the favor of having their blood tested for her type.

I went with her husband to be tested, and at the time he was trying to locate Bill, a friend of his still in the service, who was home on leave that week. Bill's parents said he'd been out for three days and three nights; they hadn't seen him.

It so happened that while we were driving to the hospital, we saw Bill staggering down the street. Against my wishes, my brother-in-law picked him up and took him along. He was in awful shape and looked terrible. It was early morning and we learned he had just spent the night with a girl.

Is Blood Tested Against Disease?

I WAS DEEPLY ashamed to be seen in his company at the hospital; but as luck would have it, his blood-type matched my sister's and he gave her a transfusion, for which we are all very grateful. However, knowing the kind of character he is, I have worried continuously since, -- fearing he might have transmitted a blood disease to her.

Can you tell me: When blood is typed preparatory to transfusion, do the hospital technicians also test its hygenic quality? I should think they would, but I have no way of knowing; and I'd die if anything happened to that kid sister of mine for lack of foresight on our part. She's salt of the earth.

I don't exactly blame my brother-in-law for grabbing at Bill in the circumstances. He was beside himself with anxiety and would have taken anybody who came along, on the chance of helping her. This may sound as if I'm not appreciative of Bill's helpful attitude; and possibly I was wrong to protest against taking him; but considering his condition, etc., I think I had cause for alarm. Can you reassure me? E. L.

Sister's View Is Intelligent

DEAR E. L.: Your anxiety deserves respect, a physician tells me. Malaria or syphilis may be—and sometimes carelessly are—transmitted via blood transfusion.

Although it is customary practice on the part of good hospitals in large cities to be on the alert, with preventive testing, to rule out such injury to patients, sometimes slips are made—in haste or negligence.

Thus, says the doctor, it's intelligent to pursue your sister's case until your mind is at rest about the outcome of her transfusion. And he recommends an immediate blood test for her, by the family physician or a first-class medical laboratory.

Wasserman Test Held Advisable

PARENTHETICALLY he adds that you might, if you wish, check with technicians who handled her transfusion, assuming the donor's contribution went directly into her veins, to see if a pre-test for syphilis were made. However, if this precaution were neglected, you might get an evasive answer, he thinks—hence the direct diagnostic approach, as of now, seems preferable in his opinion.

In passing, he mentions that emergency transfusions are often effected from a blood bank, even though the presence of a personal donor on the case is required,—the purpose being to use the donor's contribution not for the particular patient, but for bank replacement after antiseptic processing: as might have happened in this instance.

For reassurance: The doctor thinks it likely that a Wasserman test would prove negative. Yet if your sister has acquired a syphilitic infection—presumably your greatest fear—it still would be in the primary stage; and with the use of the new drug penicillin could be cured at little expense in 10 consecutive days' treatment by a good general practitioner. So take the problem to your family physician and insist that he give it serious consideration. M. H.

How can a young bride in a new community counteract malicious gossip? Mary Haworth gives her opinion in her column tomorrow.

Simple Rules Keep You Young, Says Mrs. Lodge

"NEVER overeat. Exercise daily. Sleep lots. Be alone two hours a day. Stand straight. Smoke none. Drink little and eat raw onions once a month."

This prescription for keeping young is given by dynamic Francesca Braggiotti Lodge, wife of Connecticut's Representative John Davis Lodge, in an article in the September 30 issue of Look magazine, nationally released today.

Referring to Mrs. Lodge as "Washington's most discussed woman," the article reviews the early life of attractive, Italian-born "Cesca" and her Congressman husband, her dancing and stage career, their fling in the movies, life abroad, return to this country and their campaign together for John's political seat. When an Italian audience once enthusiastically screamed for Cesca, she recalls, "I couldn't find my voice. . . . I'm not educated above the ankles."

Speaking of her husband as the "main act," Mrs. Lodge, whose "little act" is a thrilling dance career, says:

"The man must always be the "main act. Women fundamentally hate freedom and men dislike the gladiator in women. That's why so many successful career women are so lonely."

W&L—Fabrics and Patterns, Second Floor

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

1. I want to choose a crystal and china pattern. Is there any place I might obtain literature giving patterns and manufacturers?

2. My plastic shower curtain shows spots. How can it be washed or cleaned?

3. Is it customary or necessary to tip a beauty-shop operator?

4. Where can a hassock casing of leather be filled? Will an ordinary upholsterer do the job?

M. N. B.

1. A visit to the stores is the best way to look over the current china and crystal situation. Many patterns were discontinued during the war, and some will not be available for a year or so. There is a leaflet, though, that gives information about various types of dinnerware and should be helpful in making a wise choice. It's called "Better Buymanship, Use, and Care of Dinnerware," and may be obtained for 5 cents by writing the Department of Research, 919 North Michigan ave., Chicago 11, Ill.

2. Place your shower curtain on a flat surface and wash a small section at a time with a soft cloth wrung out of a solution of lukewarm water and milk soapsuds. Rinse with a cloth wrung out in clear water. Repeat on both sides until the entire curtain is cleaned. Hang it up to dry, spreading out well.

3. Tipping of beauty shop operators seems to vary from person to person and shop to shop. Most operators say they do not expect a tip but appreciate it when its given. Others say that, since they are experienced, well-trained people receiving good salaries, they prefer not to be tipped. In general, however, more people tip than don't. The usual amount is about 10 per cent.

4. Take the hassock casing to a regular upholstery firm for filling.

MARKET MEMO

RETAIL prices on meat, butter and eggs are still at about the same levels that flattened the housewife's pocketbook . . . or put her family on a diet . . . over the weekend. Butter prices range from 85 cents to 95 cents in Washington . . . eggs from 79 cents to $1.05 . . . depending on size, quality, and store . . . frying chickens are around 58 cents to 60 cents a pound . . . turkey and duck prices little changed. Incidentally, the first of the fall turkey crop is now arriving from the Shenandoah Valley.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are one of the few types of food not climbing the inflation ladder. There's a change here and a change there this week . . . but for the most part, prices are at or below 1945 levels. A big supply of fresh snap beans is coming in from New Jersey . . . celery is abundant and inexpensive . . . potatoes and cabbage the same. Lettuce, they say, will be cheaper in the stores next weekend . . . th wholesale price has dropped considerably. Honeydew melons and cantalopues are plentiful . . . watermelons are just about gone . . . only a few little ones around.

The price of tomatoes is climbing . . . partly because of rains along the East Coast. Tender young corn is coming in from New York State . . . very few squash arriving.

A couple of items that are expensive now are lemons and carrots . . . lemons because of high, hot-weather demand . . . carrots because of relative scarcity . . . particularly of the California type that comes with the tops on and is becoming increasingly popular.

I would like to remove finger marks and build up a good finish on a limed oak bedroom set. So far, I have used only liquid furniture polish. Could I apply wax or varnish after washing or must the old finish be removed first? What is the best care of this type of finish? Also, will you please print again where to obtain the Department of Agriculture booklet on cleaning different fabrics?

R. W. M.

You may be able to remove the old polish and smudges by washing with mild lukewarm soapsuds. Wash a small area at a time, rinse with a cloth wrung out of clear water, and dry with a soft cloth. Repeat, starting within the clean dry area. If the furniture is too soiled for this method to be effective, use a furniture wash made as follows: Add 3 tablespoons linseed oil and 1 tablespoon turpentine to 1 quart hot water. Mix thoroughly. Let cool. Wring a soft cloth out of this solution. Wash a small area. Dry immediately with a soft cloth. Repeat until entire surface is cleaned.

Either liquid furniture polish or wax (paste or liquid) are satisfactory for use as a finish on this type of furniture. Apply them sparingly so the furniture won't be gummy and collect dust readily. It should be necessary to apply them only two or three times a year. Between polishings, rub the wood often to build up the desired luster. Use a soft flannel polishing cloth and rub with the grain of the wood.

How may I remove gold (gilt) lettering from a brown leather briefcase.

K. A.

If the lettering is so firmly set that it will not brush off, you had better take the briefcase to the repair shop of a leather goods store and let them do it for you. The lettering is removed with acids and, without knowing the dye that has been used for your brief case, you might harm the leather.

I have an aluminum griddle which I seasoned before using with vegetable oil. After several months, I began to have difficulty with hotcakes sticking on the griddle. A thorough cleaning and reseasoning had no effect. Have you any suggestions?

K. A. C.

There is a new aluminum cleaning preparation that is recommended to remedy such sticking. It is a combination of a soap product and steel wool and is for sale in the housewares section of the department stores.

I have a crocheted tablecloth that is supposed to be ecru. I bought some of the thread during the war and, now that it is washed, some of it is white and some ecru. I have tried removing the ecru and dying it again and I have also used chlorox unsuccessfully. Is there any way I can dye it evenly, or can you suggest some concern that does this kind of work?

M. L. S.

Since you have had difficulty in trying to dye the cloth yourself, I would suggest that you take it to a professional dyer and see if he can strip the cloth and dye it again for you. Look in the yellow section of your telephone book.

How can I remove a glass stopper from a cut glass decanter without chipping or breaking the top of the bottle? I have tried running hot and cold water on the decanter, but to no use.

A. H. S.

Try soaking the decanter in lukewarm water to which vinegar has been added.

Can you tell me how to find out about construction jobs in South America or such places? I'm not speaking of civil service jobs.

H. E. W.

Have you asked at the United States Employment Office at 1624 H st. nw? They have construction jobs for the Army and Navy in Alaska, Bermuda and several other places. However, none at this time for South America. This Federal agency has listings of private as well as Government jobs.

Recently my husband received two very nice sports shirts as birthday presents. They have a very peculiar odor to them, something like formaldehyde. I have washed them twice in soap and water, but it does not get rid of the odor. They are of a soap and water fabric.

J. L. F.

Several factors may cause the objectionable odor. The most likely is that the sizing has become rancid. If this is so, a professional cleaner and dyer may be able to strip the sizing from the fabric. Since you did not mention whether the shirts were cotton or a synthetic fabric the best thing you can do is to take the shirts to your dry cleaner and let him offer a suggestion that will not hurt the fabric.

Can you tell me where I can buy or order a pattern for a slipcover for our daveno?

O. K. H.

Several local department stores carry patterns for slipcovers, and you should be able to find one among them that will fit—or can be adjusted to fit—your daveno. The Washington Post Reader Service also has a booklet for sale on "Making Slipcovers Successfully." This gives directions for the professional "pin-cut-sew" method, in which no pattern is used and the material draped right on the chair. You can obtain the booklet by sending 25c to The Washington Post Reader Service, 243 17th St., New York, 11. Print name, address, booklet title, and No. 35.

My husband's beige sports jacket was recently burned on an electric light bulb. The spot is about the size of a quarter and is on the shoulder of the jacket. Can you suggest a method of treating the spot?

C. H. B.

If the jacket is woolen, brush the scorch spot lightly with emery paper. Be careful not to rub too deeply into the cloth. If the fibers are badly scorched, it may be impossible to remove the spot. Sponging with hydrogen peroxide and sodium perborate is sometimes helpful. Use 1 teaspoon perborate to 1 pint peroxide. Rinse with water after sponging with this mixture.

The iron also has a hinged tip, making it easier to iron ruffles, pleats and folds.

You can wash stockings without even getting your hands wet if you have one of the plastic shakers made for this purpose. The shaker, which is about 10 inches tall, is made of two cups which fasten firmly together. Lukewarm water, soap flakes and stockings are put in the bottom cup, the top cup is screwed on, then you shake the whole thing up and down. It's an easy, gentle way to wash fine lace, gloves and socks, as well as stockings.

Sex Education Is Vital As Curb for Delinquency

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A reader challenges me to write more about moral training. Mrs. J. W. S. writes, "I feel that the moral breakdown of today is due to insufficient child training on morals."

The point here is what does this reader mean by morals. Morals, philosophically, cover the whole field of human conduct as it pertains to right and wrong. I have the belief that what she meant is sexual morality. Maybe she meant it in the larger sense. In such case, I feel that she is right. We should have more emphasis upon what is right, morally, and our obligation, as parents, to enunciate it and to live it. The living illustration of moral conduct is far more influential than merely the voicing of precepts about it.

If she means better education about sex, I am thoroughly in sympathy with her. Over and over it has been repeated that one of the causes of juvenile delinquency, of lax moral conduct on the part of youth, has to do with faulty education or no education at all about sex and all its ramifications. Children establish an attitude toward sex early in life. And they get those attitudes from their parents.

When the parent says nothing about sex, or implies that it is not a fit subject for conversation, she establishes an attitude which will persist throughout the child's life. Refusing to give sex knowledge when the child is eager and ready for it, does not mean the child will continue to exist without it. Everyone knows that a vacuum will be filled, with something. And this eager, thirsting mind will find someone to fill it with information. What type of information it is the parent will never know, unless she makes herself a confidant of the child and encourages him to bring his questions to her.

No child can grow up in a world that is so obviously an association of two sexes without being enormously curious about their relationships. If a parent believes sex is both a privilege and a responsibility, she will try to make the distinctions clear to the child.

Not at first, of course, for no young child would understand what she meant. But, by building a good foundation of true sex facts she can progress to those subjects which help a child to understand his privileges, his necessity to act rightly according to well-established moral codes, as well as his responsibility toward all of society.

Yes, sex education is vital and should be in the hands of the persons closest to the child, who because of his faith and confidence in them are best able to build up the right attitudes toward sex and moral conduct.

Retail Stores' Profit Margins Halved in 1947

By S. Oliver Goodman

Profit margins of department stores have been halved in the first six months of the fiscal year which began January 31.

During the period net profit dropped to 3.1 per cent of sales, according to the Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. The profit margin was based on reports from 188 retail stores throughout the Nation and compared with 6.4 per cent of sales for the first six months of the preceding fiscal year.

Commenting on the slump, John F. Kavanagh, general manager of the Controllers' Congress stated:

"Higher markdowns and lower cash discounts contributed to reduced gross margins. The number of marginal merchants increased in the second quarter of 1947 as lower net profits and, in a few instances, actual losses were evident. Generally, the stores have weathered the first impact of high markdowns and inventory adjustments."

PROMOTION: G. L. Bowen, 20 years with Cunard White Star Line, has been appointed manager of the Washington office. Bowen, formerly assistant manager here, succeeds George N. MINDING YOUR BUSINESS

12 Men in a Trailer (Fruehauf)

ONE of the stocks that has been living up to its name is Fruehauf Trailer. It's now selling for around $20 a share, just about half of its high for the year at 39. United States Steel isn't down nearly so much—79⅜ to 69. General Motors is off from 65⅞ to 58. Even Pennsylvania Railroad hasn't done so badly—off from 26⅞ to 18. So, there's just no argument about it: Fruehauf sure is a trailer.

Livingston

According to the Wall Street hush-hush, a large estate in Cleveland has been liquidating the stock. "Inheritance tax selling," goes the report. It has been suggested that the liquidators of the estate would have done better by offering the stock in a block. Instead, the stock was dribbled onto the market.

Earnings make the stock look cheap. Net profit came to $2,759,161 in the first half, or $2.06 per share. That, versus $1.88 per share in the corresponding period of last year. But earnings aren't everything. And what is happening to Fruehauf may also be happening to other enterprises. Inventories are "rather large." They run to $40,500,000 out of current assets of $59,500,000, or 68 cents on the dollar. In a rising commodity market that's fine. But let the market get saggy, and the banks—to whom Fruehauf owes $21,000,000—may get nervous and want to hold intensive conferences with the management.

HARVEY C. FRUEHAUF, president of the company, explains the inventory expansion logically enough. Trailer production is being transferred from Detroit to a plant in Avon Lake, Ohio. The company wanted to build up a "good stock" to meet customer demands during the changeover.

Trailers piled up in company warehouses for another reason. Customers have been unable to obtain tractor-trucks. And a trailer without a motor is like a factory without machinery. No works. So customers put off delivery dates. Of late, however, the situation has "improved." Fruehauf expects that inventories will be down "several millions" by the end of this quarter, and bank debt may be cut in half by the end of the year.

Caught in the stock's slide are 12 Fruehauf executives, including Roy A. Fruehauf, executive vice-president. Two years ago they bought 56,000 shares of common at $28.50 a share—with buoyant regard for the company's future. They didn't have the cash, so the company took notes for the $1,596,000, which since has been reduced to $1,398,703. The company then sold the notes to the National Bank of Detroit with a commitment to buy them back after December 13, 1947, "at and upon the request of the bank."

As of June 30, the average debt per share was $24.98, or about $5 above the market price. Theoretically, some of the executives—worried about their under-water loans—may have sold out, thus adding to the liquidation in the stock. But Harvey Fruehauf is pretty sure this is not so. During 1946, when the stock was selling in the high forties, some of them thought of taking profits, but decided against it. To have done so recently would mean (1) taking a loss and (2) abandoning the original purpose: Capitalizing on their personal contributions to the company's success. Such capitalization—as long as the loan is uncalled—doesn't cost anything. Dividends on the stock cover interest charges and leave something over to pay off the debt.

THE FRUEHAUF PLAN illustrates anew the danger of company-sponsored stock purchases. In any such plan, the buyers are not completely free agents. To sell out on a rise—as they could have done last year—courts the criticism that the executives took a free ride. Conceivably it could incite an SEC investigation.

The company isn't a free agent, either. At the time of the plan, the executives may have fitted their jobs and one another. But relationships change. And if the company has a note and if the payment of that note depends on the executive's salary, the freedom to ask resignations is impaired. Also the company feels obligated—as a matter of propriety—to see the purchaser through.

Stock-purchase plans wed management to a company and a company to a management. In a rising market everyone's gay. But on a falling market it causes anguish. An outright gift of stock—with a time limit—has more to recommend it. At least the executive then is not watching the erosion of his salary in the purchase of something that's worth less than he's paying for it. And don't tell me that when the market's down—when he has lost money—he'll work all the harder to make the company's stock go up. If he was worth being taken into the plan in the first place, then he's working that hard already.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Grains spurted sharply on the Board of Trade today as statements by high Agriculture and Commerce Department officials continued to emphasize the poor world-wide cereal situation.

With the July, 1948, contract in the lead, wheat set the pace for the upturn by jumping as much as 10 cents, the daily limit. The September corn delivery established a new all-time high at $2.63½. Soybeans and lard were strong with grains.

Wheat closed 6¾@10 higher, September, 2.80; corn was 6@7⅝ higher, September, 2.65½@2.65¾, and oats were 1⅞@2⅜ higher, September, 1.21@1.20⅝. November soybeans closed at 3.39¼, up 8 cents and at a new seasonal peak.

Distinguishing feature of the market was the lack of offerings. Buying in small lots came mostly through commission houses and was sufficient to cause the wide upturn despite a comparatively slow trade. There was also a moderate amount of mill buying in wheat.

Attracting considerable attention were statements by Acting Secretary of Agriculture Dodd, who said voluntary rationing of food this winter is being considered, and Secretary of Commerce Harriman, who asked the American people to "voluntarily reduce" their consumption of meat.

Harriman listed three ways to provide Europe with food to make the Marshall Plan work. One of these, he said, was "to bid up the price of wheat to a point where it will not be profitable to feed it to animals." He said this was "impracticable from the standpoint of our own economy."

Train Youth For Industry, Va. Is Urged

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—Virginia was urged yesterday to set up trade schools to provide skilled workers for State industries.

Dr. B. H. Van Oot, State supervisor of trade and industrial education, in his 1946-47 report to Superintendent G. Tyler Miller, said further development of the trade and industrial education program calls for:

1. General shop work to be offered in every high school.

2. More stress on vocational preparation of girls and women.

3. Adequate State funds for vocational training of employed workers who cannot now be reached because of limitations and restrictions of the Federal vocation laws.

Dr. Van Oot pointed out that industries in Virginia that are capable of expanding are prevented from doing so because of lack of skilled labor. He said skilled labor is being imported into the State when certain types of work requiring high skill and technical knowledge are required for the successful performance of the job.

During the past school year, Dr. Van Oot reported 20,629 working people in Virginia, representing 148 different vocations, received instruction in vocational skills and related technical information through the State Department of Education.

'Independence' on Trip To Northern Air Base

Presque Isle, Me., Sept. 15 (AP). High ranking Army Air Forces officers arrived here today in the Independence, Air Transport Command plane designed for President Truman, and left for northern bases after an hour-long inspection. Neither Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper, ATC commanding general who headed the party, nor his companions made public comment.

In the group were Maj. Gen. George McDonald, intelligence headquarters, AAF; Maj. Gen. David N. Schlatter, AAF headquarters; Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Power, deputy chief of staff, operations headquarters; Gill Robb Wilson, New York aviation commentator, and a number of junior officers.

Civil Air Cadets To Fly With Guard

Youngsters of the Civil Air Patrol cadet organization will get a chance to know more about military flying by riding with National Guard pilots.

Maj. Gen. B. Miltonberger, chief of the National Guard Bureau, said yesterday that the cadets—both boys and girls—will be permitted to fly with National Guard pilots. However, such flights will be only in daylight and limited to local flying, with the youngsters barred from formation flying, gunnery or other operations of a hazardous nature. Junior fliers, under 17 years, must have the consent of their parents.

Illegal Cars Sought

Copyright, 1947, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Paris, Sept. 15—American military police were reported today to have joined the French guardians of the law in the nation-wide hunt for the large number of American automobiles believed to have been imported in France illegally.

The American cars were imported into France as "gifts" from American friends and escaped customs duties.

Boy Wedged 22 Hours Inside Chimney

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Six-year-old Henry Bishop was rescued today from an unused chimney in which he had been wedged for almost 22 hours after he fell into it feet first while playing on an apartment house roof.

Grimed with soot streaked by rain, and bruised and stiff from his long imprisonment, Henry had only one complaint after a police emergency squad chopped a hole in the chimney and pulled him out: "I'm hungry."

Arab Leader in U. S.

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Jamal Effendi Husseini, deputy chairman of the Arab Higher Committee for Palestine and cousin of the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, arrived today to join the Arab fight against partition of the Holy Land.

Jury Blames Hanging of Boy On Comic Books

Pittsburgh, Sept. 15 (AP).—A coroner's jury today blamed comic books in connection with the hanging of 12-year-old Billy Becker in the cellar of his Sewickley home.

The jury returned a verdict of accidental death but scored the dime thrillers as a contributing factor in the boy's death.

Billy was found hanged by a clothesline tossed over a rafter last August 29.

His mother, Mrs. Charles Becker, told the jury her son was an incessant reader of the books and probably hanged himself re-enacting one scene.

"I burned everyone I found," she cried, "but Billy always found ways of hiding them."

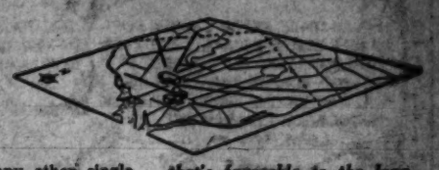
Joe Means Well, But Things Happen to Him



My friend Joe (whom the hacker recognized by the way he fell down the stairs) reports another embarrassing experience.

It was early morning, and the knocking on his door was persistent enough to bring Joe to semiconsciousness. He dragged himself out of bed to answer it.

"I wonder if you can help me," said the stranger as he held out for Joe's perusal a pocket-folder in which some papers were displayed.

Automatically Joe fished 15 cents out of his pocket and sleepily mumbled something about being sorry that he didn't have any more change for this worthy cause. But the stranger shook his head.

"I'm afraid you don't understand," he said. "These are my FBI credentials. I want your help in locating the resident manager of this building."

JACKPOT

A small pair of scissors recently disappeared from my desk. In an effort to recoup my 89-cent loss, I posted a notice asking the borrower to return them—no questions asked.

To date I have gotten one small pair, condition fair; one pair slightly larger and better than mine, and one expensive pair of 12-inch shears.

Three of my colleagues have cleared their consciences—but my own scissors are still missing.

I'm reminded of the story Jerry Kluttz tells about a fellow named Al, who works in one of Interior's file dungeons.

Al was counting about 60 cents worth of change one day, to make sure he had enough to pay for his lunch.

The office extrovert came along and struck Al's hand, sending the coins flying in all directions.

Muttering dark threats, Al got down on all fours and began foraging under desks and behind filing cabinets, steam pipes, and radiators.

When he got to his feet again 15 minutes later, he had $2.69.

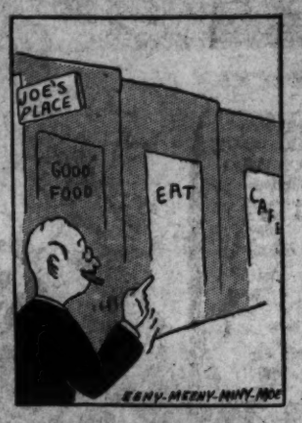
HUMAN NATURE

He passes by
With head held high,
His face a rosy tint.
The reason, sir?
Just hear him purr:
"I've had my name in print."
(Thanks to W. C. Fahey)

NOMINATION

Neal L. Boykin of 820 Kentucky ave. se. says that the 100 block of B st. se. (across the street from the Library of Congress) probably has more restaurants than any other single block in town.

He's counted 13, and wonders if anybody can top his nomination.



QUESTION AND ANSWER

Pat Murphy writes:

"I think the new long shirts are very attractive. Besides, changes in styles make things more interesting. Why don't you ever print any comment that's favorable to the long shirts?"

Very simple, Pat. Because you're the first advocate of the new styles who has signed her name.

QUICKIE

Peggy Elliott of 1115 N. Pitt st., Alexandria, Va., is amazed to learn from Hedda Hopper's column that:

"Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr. . . . expects her third child within five weeks."

In Hollywood anything is possible, Peggy. I think it's done with trick photography.

It's the only way most Hollywood couples can raise a family before their divorce decree becomes final.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Several pairs of practically new shoes, sizes 5-A and 5-AA. I'm tired of having my feet hurt from wearing shoes that are too small." (Mrs. T. R., NOrth 4635.)

How Mel Ott Hit One for the Girls

NEW YORK.—Doris Duke, who married a broken-down diplomat last week, revealed one phase of the Poor Little Rich Girl's Life, on the day she inherited 10 million dollars. This was only part of her total inheritance . . . On that day she was at El Morocco where a party was given for her. "What a nice birthday gift," sighed one of the guests . . . "Yes, I did have a nice birthday gift," said Miss Duke, poo-pooing the 10 million dollars. "Someone gave me a calf, and that's the gift which pleases me most—because the calf really loves me."

CHALLENGE: Mel Ott told this story in Toots Shor's, of his visit to his daughter at camp, when she insisted that he step up to bat during the girls's softball game. "The girls want to see you hit," she told Ott. The Giants' manager suggested: "But suppose I don't get a good hit?" . . . "You will," said his daughter. . . . "Then suppose I hit the ball hard, and it hits one of the girls?" Ott pleaded . . . "You won't," said his daughter . . . Ott stepped up to bat. Came the pitch, and he place-hit the ball into an empty, uncovered spot in right field.

UNDERSTANDING: Two Soviet reporters—Zhukov of Pravda, and Izakov of Izvestia—arrived at the United Nations this week and were introduced to a New York reporter who said that he would like to interview them. They hesitated and started to stall . . . Another Soviet pressman assured them that it would be all right and explained: There is a nonaggressive pact among journalists."

RACKET: Two musical comedy stars, who now are among the most famous in show business, tell this story of their early days in New York, when they had first arrived and shared an apartment. They were rehearsing for their first show and had little money. They invested the remnants of their savings in the purchase of a Persian cat. When the town's wealthy gentlemen would come a-calling, they'd join the ladies in admiring the cat . . . "Yes, isn't he a darling?" the girls would say. "Too bad we have to send him back tomorrow. We never realized he'd cost so much" . . . The gentlemen were gentlemen, and each one paid.

DEATH: One of the top Soviet officials in this country was asked this week about Stalin's physical condition. He scoffed at the reports that Stalin was in poor health. "But we hear that Stalin is dying," the Soviet official was told . . . "Stalin dying?" he repeated. "Everybody is dying. As soon as you're born you start to die."

ART: When Charles Lederer, who collaborated with Ben Hecht in writing "Kiss of Death," learned that Darryl Zanuck had edited their story, he expressed the author's resentment. Zanuck therefore bet Lederer $25 that the movie would receive unanimous praise from the critics. The day after the premiere, Lederer sent his $25 check to Zanuck . . . Hecht, however, is unreconciled and still resentful of the changes made in the script. "The fact that the critics all praised it is no consolation," said Hecht. "It's as if the Hellenistic sculptor who made the Venus de Milo were to return and find that it is the most admired of all surviving sculptural works. 'Yeah,' he'd say, 'but you should've seen her before she had her arms chopped off.'"

What the New National Guard Means to You

A MESSAGE FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

WE OWE our existence as a nation to the tradition of service of our citizens. It was an army of citizen soldiers which George Washington led to victory in the American Revolution. At the end of that war, the first Congress asked General Washington to give his views on what the military policy of the new nation should be. This was his answer:

> " . . . every citizen who enjoys the protection of a free government, owes not only a proportion of his property but even of his personal services to the defense of it."

Today the new National Guard gives every man an opportunity to give that personal service to his country and at the same time to advance himself. In National Guard units all over the country, thousands of veterans and other ambitious young men are finding the opportunity to study and learn the things that help them advance in their civilian jobs. They are finding the fellowship that is part and parcel of America. They are participating in a sports and recreation program that keeps them fit. And they are receiving the training that helps keep America strong.

Because of the National Guard's importance to our national defense, I have proclaimed September 16th as National Guard Day and have directed that a nationwide recruiting campaign be conducted to fill its ranks.
